

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2011 with funding from
LYRASIS Members and Sloan Foundation

<http://www.archive.org/details/marriagealamodec00dryd>

MARRIAGE A-la-Mode.

A COMEDY.

As it is Acted at the THEATRE ROYAL.

Written by JOHN DRYDEN, Servant to His Majesty.

*Quicquid sum ego, quamvis
Infra Lucilli censum ingeniumque, tamen me
Cum magnis vixisse, invita fatebitur usque
Invidia, & fragili quærens illidere dentem
Offendet solido.*

Horat. Serm.

L O N D O N,

Printed by T. N. for Henry Herringman, and are to be sold at the Anchor in the Lower Walk of the New Exchange. 1673.

Givson

PP

2415

Pic

1/13

To the Right Honourable,

The EARL of

ROCHESTER.

My Lord,

Humbly Dedicate to Your Lordship that Poem, of which you were pleas'd to appear an early Patron, before it was Acted on the Stage. I may yet go farther, with your permission, and say, That it receiv'd amendment from your noble hands, e're it was fit to be presented. You may please likewise to remember, with how much favour to the Authour, and indulgence to the Play, you commended it to the view of His Majesty, then at Windſor, and by His Approbation of it in Writing, made way for its kind reception on the Theatre. In this Dedication therefore, I may ſeem to imitate a Cuſtom of the Ancients, who offer'd to their Gods the Firſtlings of the Flock, which I think they call'd Ver Sacrum, becauſe they help'd 'em to increaſe. I am ſure, if there be any thing in this Play, wherein I have rais'd my ſelf beyond the ordinary lowneſs of my Comedies; I ought wholly to acknowledge it to the favour, of being admitted into your Lordſhip's Converſation. And not onely I, who pretend not to this way, but the beſt Comick Writers of our Age, will joyn with me to acknowledge, that they have copy'd the Gallantries of Courts, the Delicacy of Expreſſion, and the Decencies of Behaviour, from your Lordſhip, with more ſucceſs, then if they had taken their Models from the Court of France. But this, my Lord, will be no wonder to the world, which knows the excellencie of your Natural parts, and thoſe you have acquir'd in a Noble Education. That which with more reaſon I admire, is, that being ſo abſolute a Courtier, you have not forgot, either the ties of Friendſhip, or the praſtiſe of Generoſity. In my little Experience of a Court (which I confeſs I deſire not to improve) I have found in it much of Intereſt, and more of Detraction: Few men there have that aſſurance of a Friend, as not to be made ridiculous by him, when they are abſent. There are a midling ſort of Courtiers, who become happy

happy by their want of wit ; but they supply that want, by an excess of malice to those who have it. And there is no such persecution as that of fools : they can never be considerable enough to be talk'd of themselves ; so that they are safe onely in their obscurity, and grow mischievous to witty men, by the great diligence of their envy, and by being always present to represent and aggravate their faults. In the mean time they are forc'd, when they endeavour to be pleasant, to live on the Offalls of their Wit, whom they decry ; and either to quote it, (which they do unwillingly) or to pass it upon others for their own. These are the men who make it their business to chase Wit from the Knowledge of Princes, lest it should disgrace their ignorance. And this kind of malice your Lordship has not so much avoided, as surmounted. But if by the excellent temper of a Royal Master, always more ready to hear good than ill, if by his inclination to love you, if by your own merit and address, if by the charmes of your Conversation, the Grace of your Behaviour, your knowledge of Greatness and Habitude in Courts, you having been able to preserve your self with Honour in the midst of so dangerous a Course ; yet at least the remembrance of those Hazards has inspir'd you with pity for other men, who being of an inferiour Wit and Quality to you, are yet Persecuted, for being that in Little, which your Lordship is in Great. For the quarrel of those people extends it self to any thing

thing of sense; and if I may be so vain to own it amongst the rest of the Poets, has sometimes reach'd to the very borders of it, even to me. So that, if our general good fortune had not rais'd up your Lordship to defend us, I know not whether any thing had been more ridiculous in Court, than Writers. 'Tis to your Lordship's favour we generally owe our Protection and Patronage: And to the Nobleness of your Nature, which will not suffer the least shadow of your Wit to be contemn'd in other men. You have been often pleas'd not onely to excuse my imperfections, but to vindicate what was tolerable in my Writings from their censures And what I never can forget, you have not onely been careful of my Reputation, but of my Fortune. You have been Sollicitous to supply my neglect of my self; and to overcome the fatal Modesty of Poets, which submits them to perpetual wants, rather than to become importunate with those people, who have the liberality of Kings in their disposing; and who dishonouring the Bounty of their Master, suffer such to be in necessity, who endeavour at least to please him: and for whose entertainment He has generously provided, if the Fruits of His Royal favour were not often stopp'd in other hands. But your Lordship has given me occasion, not to complain of Courts, whil't you are there: I have found the effects of your Mediation in all my Concernments; and they were so much the more noble in you, because they were wholly voluntary.

I became

I became your Lordship's (if I may venture on the Similitude) as the world was made, without knowing him who made it; and brought onely a passive obedience to be your Creature. This Nobleness of yours I think my self the rather oblig'd to own, because otherwise it must have been lost to all remembrance: for you are endued with that excellent quality of a frank Nature, to forget the good which you have done.

But, my Lord, I ought to have consider'd, that you are as great a Judge, as you are a Patron; and that in praising you ill, I shall incur a higher note of ingratitude, then that I thought to have avoided. I stand in need of all your accustom'd goodness for the Dedication of this Play: which though, perhaps, it be the best of my Comedies, is yet so faulty, that I should have fear'd you, for my Critick, if I had not with some policy given you the trouble of being my Protector. Wit seems to have lodg'd it self more Nobly in this Age, than in any of the former: and people of my mean condition, are onely Writers, because some of the Nobility, and your Lordship in the first place, are above the narrow praises which Poessie could give you. But let those who love to see themselves exceeded, encourage your Lordship in so dangerous a quality: for my own part, I must confess, that I have so much of self-interest, as to be content with reading some Papers of your Verses, without desiring you should proceed to a Scene or Play: with the common prudence of those, who are worsted in a Duel, and declare they are satisfied when they are first wounded. Your Lordship has but another step to make, and from the Patron of Wit, you may become its Tyrant: and Oppress our little Reputations with more ease then you now protect them. But these, my Lord, are designs, which I am sure you harbour not; any more then the French King is contriving the Conquest of the Swissers. 'Tis a barren Triumph, which is not worth your pains, and wou'd onely rank him amongst your Slaves, who is already,
the

My Lord,

Your Lordships

Most obedient and most faithful Servant,

JOHN DRYDEN.

Prologue.

Lord, how reform'd and quiet we are grown,
Since all our Braves and all our Wits are gone:
Fop-corner now is free from Civil War:
White-Wig and Vizard make no longer jar.
France, and the Fleet, have swept the Town so clear,
That we can Act in peace, and you can hear.
'Twas a sad sight, before they march'd from home,
To see our Warriours, in Red Wastecoats, come,
With hair tuck'd up, into our Tireing-room.
But 'twas more sad to hear their last Adieu,
The Women sob'd, and swore they would be true;
And so they were, as long as e're they cou'd:
But powerful Guinee cannot be withstood,
And they were made of Play house flesh and bloud.
Fate did their Friends for double use ordain,
In Wars abroad, they grinning Honour gain,
And Mistresses, for all that stay, maintain.

Now they are gone, 'tis dead Vacation here,
For neither Friends nor Enemies appear.
Poor pensivè Punk now peeps ere Plays begin,
Sees the bare Bench, and dares not venture in :
But manages her last Half-crown with care,
And trudges to the Mall, on foot, for Air.
Our City Friends so far will hardly come,
They can take up with Pleasures nearer home ;
And see gay Shows, and gawdy Scenes elsewhere :
For we presume they seldom come to hear.
But they have now ta'n up a glorious Trade,
And cutting Moorcraft, struts in Masquerade.
There's all our hope, for we shall show to day,
A Masquing Ball, to recommend our Play :
Nay, to endear 'em more, and let 'em see,
We scorn to come behind in Courtesie,
We'll follow the new Mode which they begin,
And treat 'em with a Room, and Couch within :
For that's one way, how e're the Play fall short,
T' oblige the Town, the City, and the Court.

Persons

Persons Represented.

MEM

17
The following persons are represented in the above named association and are entitled to the same rights
as the members of the same.

W. J. ...

W. J. ...
W. J. ...
W. J. ...
W. J. ...

W. J. ...

Persons Represented.

MEN.

	By
Polydamas , Usurper of Sicily-----	Mr. Winterhall.
Leonidas , the Rightful Prince, un- known-----	} Mr. Kynaston.
Argaleon , Favourite to Polydamas --	Mr. Lydall.
Hermogenes , Foster-father to Leo- nidas -----	} Mr. Cartwright.
Eubulus , his Friend and Companion	Mr. Watson.
Rhodophil , Captain of the Guards--	Mr. Mobun.
Palamede , a Courtier-----	Mr. Hart.

WOMEN.

	By
Palmyra , Daughter to the Usurper--	Mrs. Coxe.
Amalthea , Sister to Argaleon ---	Mrs. James.
Doralice , Wife to Rhodophil ---	Mrs. Marshall.
Melantha , an Affected Lady---	Mrs. Bowtell.
Philotis , Woman to Melantha ---	Mrs. Reeve.
Belisa , Woman to Doralice ---	Mrs. Slade.
Artemis , a Court-Lady.--	Mrs. Uphill.

Scene, SICILIE.

MARRIAGE

MARRIAGE A-la-Mode.

ACT I. SCENE I.

Walks near the Court.

Enter Doralice and Beliza.

Der. B Eliza, bring the Lute into this Arbor, the Walks are empty : I would try the Song the Princess Amalthea bad me learn. They go in, and sing.

I.

W *Hy should a foolish Marriage Vow
Which long ago was made,
Oblige us to each other now
When Passion is decay'd?*

We lov'd, and we lov'd, as long as we cou'd,

Till our love was lov'd out in us both:

But our Marriage is dead, when the Pleasure is fled:

'Twas Pleasure first made it an Oath.

B

2. If

2.

*If I have Pleasures for a Friend,
And farther love in store,
What wrong has he whose joys did end,
And who cou'd give no more?*

*'Tis a madness that he Should be jealous of me,
Or that I shou'd bar him of another :
For all we can gain,
Is to give our selves pain,
When neither can hinder the other.*

Enter Palamede, in Riding Habit, and hears the Song: Re-enter Doralice and Beliza.

Bel. Madam, a Stranger:

Dor. I did not think to have had witnessers of my bad singing.

Pala. If I have err'd, Madam, I hope you'l pardon the curiosity of a Stranger; for I may well call my self so, after five years absence from the Court: But you have freed me from one error:

Dor. What's that, I beseech you?

Pala. I thought good voices; and ill faces, had been inseparable; and that to be fair and sing well, had been onely the priviledge of Angels.

Dor. And how many more of these fine things can you say to me?

Pala. Very few, Madam, for if I should continue to see you some hours longer: You look so killingly, that I should be mute with wonder.

Dor. This will not give you the reputation of a Wit with me: you travelling Monsieurs live upon the stock you have got abroad, for the first day or two: to repeat with a good memory, and apply with a good grace, is all your wit. And, commonly, monly, your Gullets are sew'd up, like Cormorants: When you have regorg'd what you have taken in, you are the leanest things in Nature.

Pala. Then, Madam, I think you had best make that use of me; let me wait on you for two or three days together, and you shall hear all I have learnt of extraordinary, in other Countreys: And one thing which I never saw till I came home, that is, a Lady of a better voice, better face, and better wit, than any I have seen abroad. And, after this, if I should not declare my self most passionately in love with you, I should have less wit than yet you think I have.

Dor. A very plain, and pithy Declaration. I see, Sir, you have been travelling in Spain or Italy, or some of the hot Countreys, where men come to the point immediately. But are you sure these are not words of course? For I would not give my poor heart an occasion of complaint against me, that I engag'd it too rashly, and then could not bring it off.

Pala. Your heart may trust it self with me safely; I shall use it very civilly while it stays, and never turn it away, without fair warning to provide for it self.

Dor. First, then, I do receive your passion with as little consideration, on my part, as ever you gave it me, on yours. And now see what a miserable wretch you have made your self.

Pala. Who, I miserable? Thank you for that. Give me love enough, and life enough, and I desie Fortune.

Dor. Know then, thou man of vain imagination, know, to thy utter confusion, that I am vertuous.

Pala. Such another word, and I give up the ghost.

Dor. Then, to strike you quite dead, know, that I am marry'd too.

Pala. Art thou marry'd; O thou damnable vertuous Woman?

Dor. Yes, marry'd to a Gentleman; young, handsome, rich, valiant, and with all the good qualities that will make you despair, and hang your self.

Pala. Well, in spite of all that, I'll love you: Fortune has cut us out for one another; for I am to be marry'd within these three days. Marry'd past redemption, to a young, fair, rich, and vertuous Lady : And, it shall go hard, but I will love my Wife as little, as I perceive you do your Husband.

Marriage a-la-Mode.

Dor. Remember I invade no propriety : My servant you are onely till you are marry'd.

Pala. In the mean time, you are to forget you have a Husband.

Dor. And you, that you are to have a Wife.

Bel. Aside to her Lady. O Madam, my Lord's just at the end of the Walks ; and, if you make not haste, will discover you.

Dor. Some other time, new Servant, we'll talk further of the premisses ; in the mean while, break not my first commandment, that is, not to follow me.

Pala. But where, then, shall I find you again ?

Dor. At Court. Yours for two days, Sir.

Pala. And nights, I beseech you, Madam.

Exit Doralice and Beliza.

Pala. Well, I'll say that for thee, thou art a very dextrous Executioner ; thou hast done my business at one stroke : Yet I must marry another—— and yet I must love this ; and if it lead me into some little inconveniencies, as jealousies, and duels, and death, and so forth ; yet while sweet love is in the case, Fortune do thy worst, and avant Mortality.

Enter Rodophil, who seems speaking to one within.

Rho. Leave 'em with my Lieutenant, while I fetch new Orders from the King. How ? Palamede ! Sees Palamede.

Pala. Rhodophil !

Rho. Who thought to have seen you in Sicily ?

Pala. Who thought to have found the Court so far from Syracuse ?

Rho. The King best knows the reason of the progress. But answer me, I beseech you, what brought you home from travel ?

Pala. The commands of an old rich Father.

Rho. And the hopes of burying him ?

Pala. Both together, as you see, have prevail'd on my good nature.

nature. In few words, My old man has already marry'd me ; for he has agreed with another old man, as rich and as covetous as himself ; the Articles are drawn, and I have given my consent, for fear of being dis-inherited ; and yet know not what kind of woman I am to marry.

Rho. Sure your Father intends you some very ugly wife ; and has a mind to keep you in ignorance, till you have shot the gulf.

Pala. I know not that ; but obey I will, and must.

Rho. Then, I cannot chuse but grieve for all the good Girls and Curtizans of France and Italy : They have lost the most kind-hearted, doting, prodigal, humble servant, in Europe.

Pala. All I could do in these three years, I stay'd behind you, was to comfort the poor Creatures, for the loss of you. But what's the reason that in all this time, a friend could never hear from you ?

Rho. Alas, dear Palamede, I have had no joy to write, nor indeed to do any thing in the World to please me : The greatest misfortune imaginable is falln upon me.

Pala. Prithee, what's the matter ?

Rho. In one word, I am marry'd ; wretchedly marry'd ; and have been above these two years. Yes, faith, the Devil has had power over me, in spite of my Vows and Resolutions to the contrary.

Pala. I find you have sold your self for filthy lucre ; she's old, or ill-condition'd.

Rho. No, none of these : I'm sure she's young ; and, for her humor, she laughs, sings, and dances eternally ; and, which is more, we never quarrel about it, for I do the same.

Pala. You're very unfortunate indeed : Then the case is plain, she is not handsome.

Rho. A great beauty too, as people say.

Pala. As people say ? Why, you should know that best your self.

Rho. Ask those, who have smelt to a strong perfume two years together, what's the scent.

Pala. But here are good qualities enough for one woman.

Rho. Ay, too many, Palamede, if I could put 'em into three or four women, I should be content.

Pala. O, now I have found it, you dislike her for no other reason, but because she's your wife.

Rho. And is not that enough? All that I know of her perfections now, is only by memory; I remember, indeed, that about two years ago I lov'd her passionately; but those golden days are gone, Palamede: Yet I lov'd her a whole half year, double the natural term of any Mistress, and think in my conscience I could have held out another quarter; but then the World began to laugh at me, and a certain shame of being out of fashion, seiz'd me: At last, we arriv'd at that point, that there was nothing left in us to make us new to one another: yet still I set a good face upon the matter, and am infinite fond of her before company; but, when we are alone, we walk like Lions in a room, she one way, and I another: and we lie with our backs to each other so far distant, as if the fashion of great Beds was onely invented to keep Husband and Wife sufficiently asunder.

Pala. The truth is, your disease is very desperate; but, though you cannot be cur'd, you may be patch'd up a little; you must get you a Mistress, Rhodophil: that, indeed, is living upon Cordials; but, as fast as one fails, you must supply it with another. You're like a Gamester, who has lost his estate; yet, in doing that, you have learn'd the advantages of Play, and can arrive to live upon't.

Rho. Truth is, I have been thinking on't, and have just resolv'd to take your counsel; and, faith, considering the damn'd disadvantages of a marry'd man, I have provided well enough, for a poor humble sinner, that is not ambitious of great matters.

Pala. What is she, for a Woman?

Rho. One of the Stars of Syracuse, I assure you: Young enough, fair enough, and, but, for one quality, Just such a woman as I would wish.

Pala. O Friend, this is not an age to be critical in Beauty: when we had good store of handsome women, and but few Chapmen, you might have been more curious in your choice; but but now the price is enhanc'd upon us, and all Mankind set up for Mistresses, so that poor little creatures, without beauty, birth, or breeding, but onely impudence, go off at unreasonable rates: and a man, in these hard times, snaps at 'em, as he does at Broad-gold, never examines the weight, but takes light, or heavy, as he can get it.

Rho. But my Mistris has one fault that's almost unpardonable; for, being a Town-Lady, without any relation to the Court, yet she thinks her self undone, if she be not seen there three or four times a day, with the Princess Amalthea. And for the King, she haunts, and watches him so narrowly in a morning, that she prevents even the Chymists who beset his Chamber, to turn their Mercury into his Gold.

Pala. Yet, hitherto, me-thinks, you are no very unhappy man.

Rho. With all this, she's the greatest Gossip in Nature; for, besides the Court, she's the most eternal Visitor of the Town: and yet manages her time so well, that she seems ubiquitary. For my part, I can compare her to nothing but the Sun; for, like him, she takes no rest, nor ever sets in one place, but to rise in another.

Pala. I confess she had need be handsome with these qualities.

Rho. No Lady can be so curious of a new Fashion, as she is of a new French-word; she's the very Mint of the Nation; and as fast as any Bullion comes out of France, coins it immediately into our Language.

Pala. And her name is _____

Rho. No naming; that's not like a Cavalier:

Find her, if you can, by my description; and I am not so ill a painter, that I need write the name beneath the Picture.

Pala. Well, then, how far have you proceeded in your love?

Rho. 'Tis yet in the bud, and what fruit it may bear I cannot tell; for this insufferable humour, of haunting the Court, is so predominant; that she has hitherto broken all her assignations with me, for fear of missing her visits there.

Pala. That's the hardest part of your adventure: but, for ought I see, Fortune has us'd us both alike; I have a strange kind of Mistris too in Court, besides her I am to marry.

Rho. You have made haste to be in love then; for, if I am not mistaken, you are but this day arriv'd.

Pala. That's all one, I have seen the Lady already, who has charm'd me, seen her in these Walks, courted her, and receiv'd, for the first time, an answer that does not put me into despair.

To them, Argaleon, Amalthea, Artemis.

I'll tell you at more leisure my adventures. The Walks fill apace, I see. Stay, is not that the young Lord Argaleon, the Kings Favourite?

Rho. Yes, and as proud as ever, as ambitious, and as revengeful.

Pala. How keeps he the Kings favour with these qualities?

Rho. Argaleon's father help'd him to the Crown: besides, he gilds over all his vices to the King, and, standing in the dark to him, sees all his inclinations, interests and humours, which he sometimes and soothes, that, in effect, he reigns.

Pala. His sister Amalthea, who, I guess, stands by him, seems not to be of his temper.

Rho. O, she's all goodness and generosity.

Arga. Rhodophil, the King expects you earnestly.

Rho. 'Tis done, my Lord, what he commanded: I only waited his return from Hunting. Shall I attend your Lordship to him?

Arga. No; I go first another way.

[Exit hastily.]

Pala. He seems in haste, and discompos'd.

Amal. To Rhod. after a short whisper. Your friend? then he must needs be of much merit.

Rho. When he has kis'd the King's hand, I know he'll beg the honour to kiss yours. Come, Palamede.

Exeunt Rhodo. and Pala. bowing to Amal.

Arte. Madam, you tell me most surprising news.

Amal. The fear of it, you see, Has discompos'd my brother; but to me All that can bring my Country good, is welcome.

Arte. It seems incredible, that this old King, Whom all the world thought childless, Should come to search the farthest parts of Sicily, In hope to find an Heir.

Amal.

Marriage a-la-Mode.

9

Amal. To lessen your astonishment, I will Unfold some private passages of State,
Of which you yet are ignorant : Know, first,
That this Polydamas, who Reigns, unjustly
Gain'd the Crown.

Arte. Somewhat of this I have confus'dly heard.

Amal. I'll tell you all in brief : Theagenes,
Our last great King,
Had, by his Queen, one onely Son, an Infant
Of three years old, call'd, after him, Theagenes ;
The General, this Polydamas, then marri'd :
The publick Feasts for which were scarcely past,
When a Rebellion in the heart of Sicily
Call'd out the King to Arms.

Arte. _____ Polydamas
Had then a just excuse to stay behind.

Amal. His temper was too warlike to accept it :
He left his Bride, and the new joys of marriage,
And follow'd to the Feild. In short, they fought,
The Rebels were o'rcome ; but in the Fight
The too bold King receiv'd a mortal wound.
When he perceiv'd his end approaching near,
He call'd the General, to whose care he left
His Widow Queen, and Orphan Son ; then dy'd.

Arte. Then false Polydamas betray'd his trust ?

Amal. He did ; and with my father's help, for which Heav'n pardon him, so gain'd the Soldiers hearts,
That in few days he was saluted King :
And when his crimes had impudence enough
To bear the eye of day,

He march'd his Army back to Syracuse.

But see how heav'n can punish wicked men .

In granting their desires : the news was brought him

That day he was to enter it, that Eubulus,

Whom his dead Master had left Governour,

Was fled, and with him bore away the Queen,

And Royal Orphan ; but, what more amaz'd him,

His wife, now big with child, and much detesting

Her husband's practises, had willingly
Accompani'd their flight.

Arte. How I admire her vertue!

Amal. _____ What became
Of her, and them, since that, was never known;
Onely, some few days since, a famous Robber
Was taken with some Jewels of vast price,
Which, when they were delivered to the King,
He knew had been his Wife's; with these, a Letter,
Much torn, and sulli'd, but which yet he knew
To be her writing.

Arte. _____ Sure from hence he learn'd
he had a Son.

Amal. _____ It was not left so plain:
The Paper onely said, she dy'd in childbed:
But when it should have mention'd Son, or Daughter,
Just there it was torn off.

Arte. _____ Madam, the King.

To them, Polydamas, Argaleon, Guard, and Attendants.

Arga. The Robber, though thrice Rack'd, confess'd no more,
But that he took those Jewels near this place.

Poly. But yet the circumstances strongly argue,
That those, for whom I search, are not far off.

Arga. I cannot easily believe it.

Arte. _____ No,
You would not have it so. [aside.

Poly. Those I employ'd, have, in the neighbouring Hamlet,
Amongst the Fishers Cabins, made discovery
Of some young persons, whose uncommon beauty,
And graceful carriage, make it seem suspicious
They are not what they seem: I therefore sent
The Captain of my Guards, this morning early,
With orders to secure and bring 'em to me.

Enter

Marriage a-la-Mode.

11

Enter Rhodophil and Palamede.

O here he is. Have you perform'd my will ?

Rho. Sir, those whom you commanded me to bring,
Are waiting in the Walks.

Poly. _____ Conduct 'em hither.

Rho. First, give me leave

To beg your notice of this Gentleman.

Poly. He seems to merit it. His name and quality ?

Rho. Palamede, son to Lord Cleodemus of Palermo,
And new return'd from travel.

Palamede approaches, and kneels to kiss the Kings hand.

Poly. _____ You're welcome.

I knew your father well, he was both brave
And honest; we two once were fellow-soldiers
In the last Civil Wars.

Pala. I bring the same unquestion'd honesty
And zeal to serve your Majesty; the courage
You were pleas'd to praise in him,
Your Royal prudence, and your Peoples love,
Will never give me leave to try like him
In Civil Wars, I hope it may in Foreign.

Poly. Attend the Court, and it shall be my care
To find out some employment, worthy you.
Go, Rhodophil, and bring in those without.

[Exeunt. Rho. & Pala.

*Rhodophil returns again immediately, and with him
Enter Hermogenes, Leonidas, and Palmyra.*

Behold two miracles !

Of different sexes, but of equal form :
So matchless both, that my divided soul

Can scarcely ask the Gods a Son, or Daughter,
For fear of losing one. If from your hands,

You Powers, I shall this day receive a Daughter,
Argaleon; she is yours; but, if a Son,

{ Looking earnestly on Leon. and Palmyra.

Then Amalthea's love shall make him happy.

Arga. Grant, heav'n, this admirable Nymph may prove That issue which he seeks.

Amal. Venus Urania, if thou art a Goddess,
Grant that sweet Youth may prove the Prince of Sicily.

Poly. Tell me, old man, and tell me true, from whence [to Her.
Had you that Youth and Maid?

Her. ————— From whence you had
Your Scepter, Sir: I had 'em from the Gods.

Poly. The Gods then have not such another gift.
Say who their Parents were.

Her. ————— My Wife, and I.

Arga. It is not likely, a Virgin of so excellent a beauty
Should come from such a Stock.

Amal. Much less, that such a Youth, so sweet, so graceful,
Should be produc'd from Peasants.

Her. Why, Nature is the same in Villages,
And much more fit to form a noble issue
Where it is least corrupted.

Poly. He talks, too like a man that knew the world
To have been long a Peasant. But the Rack
Will teach him other language. Hence with him.

[As the Guard are carrying him away, his Perruke falls off.
Sure I have seen that face before. Hermogenes!
'Tis he, 'tis he who fled away with Eubulus,
And with my dear Eudoxia.

Her. Yes, Sir, I am Hermogenes.
And if to have been loyal be a crime,
I stand prepar'd to suffer.

Poly. If thou would'st live, speak quickly,
What is become of my Eudoxia?

Where is the Queen and young Theagenes?

Where Eubulus? and which of these is mine? { Pointing to Leon.
and Palm.

Her. Eudoxia is dead, so is the Queen.
The infant King her son, and Eubulus.

Poly. Traitor, 'tis false: produce 'em, or —————

Her. ————— Once more
I tell you, they are dead; but leave to threaten,

Marriage a-la-Mode.

13

For you shall know no further.

Poly. Then prove indulgent to my hopes, and be
My friend for ever. Tell me, good Hermogenes,
Whose Son is that brave Youth?

Her. ————— Sir, he is yours.

Poly. Fool that I am, thou see'st that so I wish it,
And so thou flatter'st me.

Her. ————— By all that's holy.

Poly. Again. Thou canst not swear too deeply.
Yet hold, I will believe thee: ——— yet I doubt.

Her. You need not, Sir.

Arga. Believe him not; he fees you credulous,
And would impose his own base issue on you,
And fix it to your Crown.

Amal. Behold his goodly shape and feature, Sir,
Methinks he much resembles you.

Arga. I say, if you have any issue here,
It must be that fair creature;

By all my hopes I think so.

Amal. Yes, Brother, I believe you by your hopes,
For they are all for her.

Poly. ————— Call the Youth nearer.

Her. Leonidas, the King would speak with you.

Poly. Come near, and be not dazled with the splendor,
And greatness of a Court.

Leon. I need not this incouragement:
I can fear nothing but the Gods,
And for this glory, after I have seen
The Canopy of State spread wide above
In the Abyss of Heaven, the Court of Stars,
The blushing Morning, and the rising Sun,
What greater can I see?

Poly. This speaks thee born a Prince, thou art thy self

{ Embracing him.

That rising Sun, and shalt not see on earth,
A brighter then thy self. ——— All of you witness,
That for my son I here receive this Youth,
This brave, this ——— but I must not praise him further;

Because

Because he now is mine.

Leon. I wonnot, Sir, believe
That I am made your sport ;
For I find nothing in my self, but what
Is much above a scorn ; I dare give credit
To whatsoe'r a King, like you, can tell me.
Either I am, or will deserve to be your Son.

[kneeling.]

Arga. I yet maintain it is impossible
This young man should be yours ; for, if he were,
Why should Hermogenes so long conceal him
When he might gain so much by his discovery ?

Her. I stay'd a while to make him worthy,
Sir, of you.

{ To the King.

But in that time I found
Somewhat within him, which so mov'd my love,
I never could resolve to part with him.

Leon. You ask too many questions, and are [To Argaleon.
Too sawcy for a subject.

Arga. You rather over-act your part, and are Too soon a Prince.

Leon. ————— Too soon you'l find me one.

Poly. Enough, Argaleon ;
I have declar'd him mine: and you, Leonidas,
Live well with him I love.

Arga. Sir, if he be your Son, I may have leave
To think your Queen had Twins ; look on this Virgin ;
Hermogenes would enviously deprive you
Of half your treasure.

Her. ————— Sir, she is my daughter.
I could, perhaps, thus aided by this Lord,
Prefer her to be yours ; but truth forbid
I should procure her greatness by a Lie.

Poly. Come hither, beauteous Maid : are you not sorry
Your father will not let you pass for mine ?

Palm. I am content to be what heav'n has made me.

Poly. Could you not wish your self a Princess then ?

Palm. Not to be Sister to Leonidas.

Poly. Why, my sweet Maid ?

Palm.

Palm. _____ Indeed I cannot tell;
But I could be content to be his Handmaid.

Arga. I wish I had not seen her. [Aside.

Palm. I must weep for your good fortune ; [To Leonidas.
Pray pardon me, indeed I cannot help it.

Leonidas, (alas, I had forgot,
Now I must call you Prince) but must I leave you ?

Leon. I dare not speak to her ; for if I should, [Aside.
I must weep too.

Poly. No, you shall live at Court, sweet Innocence,
And see him there. Hermogenes,

Though you intended not to make me happy,
Yet you shall be rewarded for th'event.

Come, my Leonidas, let's thank the Gods ;
Thou for a Father, I for such a Son.

[Exeunt all but

Leonidas and Palmyra.

Leon. My dear Palmyra, many eyes observe me ;
And I have thoughts so tender, that I cannot
In publick speak 'em to you : some hours hence
I shall shake off these crowds of fawning Courtiers,
And then _____ [Exit Leonidas.

Palm. Fly swift, you hours, you measure time for me in vain,
Till you bring back Leonidas again.
Be shorter now ; and to redeem that wrong,
When he and I are met, be twice as long. [Exit.

ACT II. SCENE I.

Melantha and Philotis.

Phil. Count Rhodophil's a fine Gentleman indeed, Madam ;
and I think deserves your affection.

Mel. Let me die but he's a fine man ; he sings, and dances en Francois, and writes the Billets doux to a miracle.

Phil. And those are no small talents, to a Lady that understands, and values the French ayr, as your Ladiship does.

Mel. How charming is the French ayr! and what an etourdy bete is one of our untravel'd Islanders! when he would make his Court to me, let me die, but he is just Æsop's Ass; that would imitate the courtly French in his addresses; but, in stead of those, comes pawing upon me, and doing all things so mal a droitley.

Phil. 'Tis great pity Rhodophil's a married man, that you may not have an honourable Intrigue with him.

Mel. Intrigue, Philotis! that's an old phrase; I have laid that word by: Amour sounds better. But thou art heir to all my cast words, as thou art to my old Wardrobe. Oh Count Rhodophil! Ah mon cher! I could live and die with him.

Enter Palamede and a Servant.

Ser. Sir, this is my Lady.

Pala. Then this is she that is to be Divine, and Nymph, and Goddess, and with whom I am to be desperately in love.

[Bows to her, delivering a Letter.

This Letter, Madam, which I present you from your father, has given me both the happy opportunity, and the boldness, to kiss the fairest hands in Sicily.

Mel. Came you lately from Palermo, Sir?

Pala. But yesterday, Madam.

Mel. [Reading the Letter] Daughter, receive the bearer of this Letter, as a Gentleman whom I have chosen to make you happy; (O Venus, a new Servant sent me! and let me die but he has the ayre of a gallant homme) his father is the rich Lord Cleodemus, our neighbour: I suppose you'l find nothing disagreeable in his person or his converse; both which he has improv'd by travel. The Treaty is already concluded, and I shall be in Town within these three days; so that you have nothing to do, but to obey your careful Father.

(To Pala.) Sir, my Father, for whom I have a blind obedience, dience, has commanded me to receive your passionate addresses; but you must also give me leave to avow, that I cannot merit 'em, from so accomplish'd a Cavalier.

Pala. I want many things, Madam, to render me accomplish'd; and the first and greatest of 'em, is your favour.

Mel. Let me die, Philotis, but this is extremely French; but yet Count Rhodophil ——— A Gentleman, Sir, that understands the Grand mond so well, who has hunted the best conversations, and who (in short) has voyag'd, may pretend to the good graces of any Lady.

Pala. (Aside) Hay day! Grandmond! conversation! voyag'd! and good graces! I find my Mistress is one of those that run mad in new French words.

Mel. I suppose, Sir, you have made the Tour of France; and having seen all that's fine there, will make a considerable reformation in the rudeness of our Court: for, let me die, but an unfashion'd, untravel'd, meer Sicilian, is a Bete; and has nothing in the world of an honete homme.

Pala. I must confess, Madam, that ———

Mel. And what new Minouets have you brought over with you! their Minouets are to a miracle! and our Sicilian Figs are so dull and fad to 'em!

Pala. For Minouets, Madam ———

Mel. And what new Plays are there in vogue? and who danc'd best in the last Grand Ballet? Come, sweet Servant, you shall tell me all.

Pala. (Aside) Tell her all? why, she asks all, and will hear nothing ——— To answer in order, Madam, to your demands ———

Mel. I am thinking what a happy couple we shall be! for you shall keep up your correspondence abroad, and every thing that's new writ, in France, and fine, I mean all that's delicate, and bien tourné, we will have first.

Pala. But, Madam, our fortune ———

Mel. I understand you, Sir; you'll leave that to me: for the menage of a family, I know it better than any Lady in Sicily.

Pala. Alas, Madam, we ———

Mel. Then, we will never make visits together, nor see a Play, but always apart; you shall be every day at the King's

Lev. and I at the Queen's; and we will never meet, but in the Drawing-room.

Phil. Madam, the new Prince is just pass'd by the end of the Walk.

Mel. The new Prince, say'st thou? Adieu, dear Servant; I have not made my court to him these two long hours. O, 'tis the sweetest Prince! so obligent, charmant, ravissant, that— Well, I'll make haste to kiss his hands; and then make half a score visits more, and be with you again in a twinkling.

[Exit, running with Philotis.]

Pala. (Solus) Now heaven, of thy mercy, blefs me from this tongue; it may keep the field against a whole Army of Lawyers, and that in their own language, French Gibberish. 'Tis true, in the day-time, 'tis tolerable, when a man has field-room to run from it; but, to be shut up in a bed with her, like two Cocks in a pit; humanity cannot support it: I must kiss all night, in my own defence, and hold her down, like a Boy at cuffs, nay, and give her the rising blow every time she begins to speak.

Enter Rhodophil.

But here comes Rhodophil. 'Tis pretty odd that my Mistress should so much resemble his: the same News-monger, the same passionate lover of a Court, the same—— But Basta, since I must marry her, I'll say nothing, because he shall not laugh at my misfortune.

Rho. Well, Palamede, how go the affairs of love? You've seen your Mistress?

Pala. I have so.

Rho. And how, and how? has the old Cupid, your Father, chosen well for you? is he a good Woodman?

Pala. She's much handsomer than I could have imagin'd: In short, I love her, and will marry her.

Rho. Then you are quite off from your other Mistress?

Pala. You are mistaken, I intend to love 'em both, as a reasonable man ought to do. For, since all women have their faults, and imperfections, 'tis fit that one of 'em should help out t'other.

Rho.

Rho. This were a blessed Doctrine, indeed, if our Wives would hear it; but, they're their own enemies: if they would suffer us but now and then to make excursions, the benefit of our variety would be theirs; instead of one continu'd, lazy, tyr'd love, they would, in their turns, have twenty vigorous, fresh, and active loves.

Pala. And I would ask any of 'em, whether a poor narrow Brook, half dry the best part of the year, and running ever one way, be to be compar'd to a lusty Stream, that has Ebbs and Flows?

Rho. Ay; or is half so profitable for Navigation?

Enter Doralice, walking by, and reading.

Pala. Ods my life, Rhodophil, will you keep my counsel?

Rho. Yes: where's the secret?

Pala. There 'tis. [Showing Doralice.] I may tell you, as my friend, sub sigillo, &c. this is that very numerical Lady, with whom I am in love.

Rho. By all that's vertuous, my Wife!

Pala. You look strangely: how do you like her? is she not very handsome?

Rho. Sure he abuses me.

Why the devil do you ask my judgment?

Pala. You are so dogged now, you think no man's Mistress handsome, but your own. Come, you shall hear her talk too; she has wit, I assure you.

Rho. This is too much, Palamede.

Pala. Prethee do not hang back so: of an old tyr'd Lover, thou art the most bashful fellow!

Dor. Were you so near, and would not speak, dear Husband?

Pala. Husband, quotha! I have cut out a fine piece of work for my self.

Rho. Pray, Spouse, how long have you been acquainted with this Gentleman?

Dor. Who, I acquainted with this Stranger? To my best knowledge, I never saw him before.

Enter Melantha, at the other end.

Pala. Thanks, Fortune, thou hast help'd me. [Aside.

Rho. Palamede, this must not pass so: I must know your Mistress a little better.

Pala. It shall be your own fault else. Come, I'll introduce you.

Rho. Introduce me! where? {Pointing to Melantha, who swiftly passes over the Stage.

Pala. There. To my Mistress.

Rho. Who? Melantha!

O heavens, I did not see her.

Pala. But I did: I am an Eagle where I love;
I have seen her this half hour.

Dor. (Aside.) I find he has wit, he has got off so readily; but it would anger me, if he should love Melantha.

Rho. (Aside.) Now I could e'en wish it were my Wife he lov'd: I find he's to be marry'd to my Mistress.

Pala. Shall I run after, and fetch her back again, to present you to her?

Rho. No, you need not; I have the honour to have some small acquaintance with her.

Pala. (Aside.) O Jupiter! what a blockhead was I not to find it out! My Wife that must be, is his Mistress. I did a little suspect it before; well, I must marry her, because she's handsome, and because I hate to be dis-inherited for a younger Brother, which I am sure I shall be if I disobey; and yet I must keep in with Rhodophil, because I love his Wife.

(To Rhodo.) I must desire you to make my excuse to your Lady, if I have been so unfortunate to cause any mistake; and, withal, to beg the honour of being known to her.

Rho. O, that's but reason. Hark you, Spouse, pray look upon this Gentleman as my friend; whom, to my knowledge, you have never seen before this hour.

Dor. I'm so obedient a Wife, Sir, that my Husbands commands shall ever be a Law to me.

Enter.

Enter Melantha again, hastily, and runs to embrace Doralice.

Mela. O, my dear, I was just going to pay my devoirs to you ; I had not time this morning, for making my Court to the King, and our new Prince. Well, never Nation was so happy, and all that, in a young Prince ; and he's the kindest person in the World to me, let me die, if he is not.

Dor. He has been bred up far from Court, and therefore—

Mel. That imports not : Though he has not seen the Grandmond, and all that, let me die but he has the air of the Court, most absolutely.

Pala. But yet, Madam, he—

Mel. O, Servant, you can testify that I am in his good Graces. Well, I cannot stay long with you, because I have promis'd him this Afternoon to—— But hark you, my dear, I'll tell you a Secret.

Whispers to Doralice.

Rho. The Devil's in me, that I must love this Woman. Aside.

Pala. The Devil's in me, that I must marry this Woman.

Aside.

Mel. Raising her Voice. So the Prince and I—— But you must make a Secret of this, my dear, for I would not for the World your Husband should hear it, or my Tyrant, there, that must be.

Pala. Well, fair impertinent, your whisper is not lost, we hear you.

Aside.

Dor. I understand then, that——

Mel. I'll tell you, my dear, the Prince took me by the hand, and press'd it al a derobbée, because the King was near, made the doux yeux to me, and, in suite, said a thousand Gallantries, or let me die, my dear.

Dor. Then I am sure you——

Mel. You are mistaken, my dear.

Dor. What before I speak?

Mel. But I know your meaning ; you think, my dear, that I assum'd something of fierté into my Countenance, to rebute him ; but, quite contrary, I regarded him, I know not how to express it in our dull Sicilian Language, d'un ayr enjoué ; and said nothing.

thing but ad autre, ad autre, and that it was all grimace, and would not pass upon me.

Enter Artemis: Melantha sees her, and runs away from Doralice.

To Artemis. My dear, I must beg your pardon, I was just making a loose from Doralice, to pay my respects to you: Let me die, if I ever pass time so agreeably as in your company, and if I would leave it for any Lady's in Sicily.

Arte. The Princess Amalthea is coming this way.

Enter Amalthea: Melantha runs to her.

Mel. O dear Madam! I have been at your Lodgings, in my new Galeche, so often, to tell you of a new Amour, betwixt two persons whom you would little suspect for it; that, let me die, if one of my Coach-horses be not dead, and another quite tyr'd, and sunk under the fatigue.

Amal. O, Melantha, I can tell you news, the Prince is coming this way.

Mel. The Prince, O sweet Prince! He and I are to—— and I forgot it. —— Your pardon, sweet Madam, for my abruptness. Adieu, my dears. Servant, Rodophil; Servant, Servant, Servant All. Exit running.

Amal. Rodophil, a word with you. Whispers.

Dor. to Pala. Why do you not follow your Mistress, Sir?

Pala. Follow her? Why, at this rate she'll be at the Indies within this half hour.

Dor. However, if you can't follow her all day, you'll meet her at night, I hope?

Pala. But can you, in charity, suffer me to be so mortify'd, without affording me some relief? If it be but to punish that sign of a Husband there; that lazy matrimony, that dull insipid taste, who leaves such delicious fare at home, to dine abroad, on worse meat, and to pay dear for't into the bargain.

Dor. All this is in vain: Assure your self, I will never admit of any visit from you in private.

Pala.

Pala. That is to tell me, in other words, my condition is desperate.

Dor. I think you in so ill a condition, that I am resolv'd to pray for you, this very evening, in the close Walk, behind the Terras; for that's a private place, and there I am sure no body will disturb my devotions. And so, good-night, Sir. [Exit.

Pala. This is the newest way of making an appointment, I ever heard of: let women alone to contrive the means; I find we are but dunces to 'em. Well, I will not be so prophane a wretch as to interrupt her devotions; but to make 'em more effectual, I'll down upon my knees, and endeavour to joyn my own with 'em. [Exit.

Amal. (to Rhodophil) I know already they do not love each other; and that my Brother acts but a forc'd obedience to the Kings commands; so that, if a quarrel should arise betwixt the Prince and him, I were most miserable on both sides.

Rho. There shall be nothing wanting in me, Madam, to prevent so sad a consequence.

Enter the King, Leonidas; the King whispers Amalthea.

(To himself) I begin to hate this Palamede, because he is to marry my Mistris: yet break with him I dare not, for fear of being quite excluded from her company. 'Tis a hard case when a man must go by his Rival to his Mistris: but 'tis at worst but using him like a pair of heavy Boots in a dirty journey; after I have foul'd him all day, I'll throw him off at night. [Exit.

Amal. (to the King) This honour is too great for me to hope.

Poly. You shall this hour have the assurance of it.

Leonidas, come hither; you have heard, I doubt not, that the Father of this Princess Was my most faithful friend, while I was yet A private man; and when I did assume This Crown, he serv'd me in that high attempt. You see, then, to what gratitude obliges me; Make your addresses to her.

Leon. Sir, I am yet too young to be a Courtier;

I should

I should too much betray my ignorance,
And want of breeding, to so fair a Lady.

Amal. Your language speaks you not bred up in Desarts,
But in the softness of some Asian Court,
Where luxury and ease invent kind words,
To cozen tender Virgins of their hearts.

Poly. You need not doubt
But in what words soe're a Prince can offer
His Crown and Person, they will be receiv'd.
You know my pleasure, and you know your duty.

Leon. Yes, Sir, I shall obey, in what I can.

Poly. In what you can, Leonidas? Consider,
He's both your King, and Father, who commands you.
Besides, what is there hard in my injunction?

Leon. 'Tis hard to have my inclination forc'd.
I would not marry, Sir; and, when I do,
I hope you'll give me freedom in my choice.

Poly. View well this Lady,
Whose mind as much transcends her beauteous face,
As that excels all others.

Amal. My beauty, as it ne'er could merit love,
So neither can it beg: and, Sir, you may
Believe that, what the King has offer'd you,
I should refuse, did I not value more
Your person than your Crown.

Leon. ————— Think it not pride,
Or my new fortunes swell me to contemn you;
Think less, that I want eyes to see your beauty;
And least of all think duty wanting in me
To obey a father's will: but —————

Poly. ————— But what, Leonidas?
For I must know your reason; and be sure
It be convincing too.

Leon. ————— Sir, ask the Stars,
Which have impos'd love on us, like a fate,
Why minds are bent to one, and fly another?
Ask why all beauties cannot move all hearts?
For though there may

Be made a rule for colour, or for feature ;
There can be none for liking.

Poly. Leonidas, you owe me more

Then to oppose your liking to my pleasure.

Leon. I owe you all things, Sir ; but something too
I owe myself.

Poly. You shall dispute no more ; I am a King,
And I will be obey'd.

Leon. You are a King, Sir ; but you are no God ;
Or if you were, you could not force my will.

Poly. But you are just, you Gods ; O you are just,
In punishing the crimes of my rebellion
With a rebellious Son !

[Aside

Yet I can punish him, as you do me.

Leonidas, there is no jesting with
My will : Ine'r had done so much to gain
A Crown, but to be absolute in all things.

Amal. O, Sir, be not so much a King, as to Forget you are a Father : Soft indulgence
Becomes that name. Though Nature gives you pow'r,
To bind his duty, 'tis with silken Bonds :
Command him, then, as you command yourself :

He is as much a part of you, as are
Your Appetite, and Will, and those you force not,
But gently bend, and make 'em pliant to your Reason.

Poly. It may be I have us'd too rough a way :
Forgive me, my Leonidas ; I know
I lie as open to the gusts of passion,
As the bare Shore to every beating Surge :
I will not force thee, now ; but I intreat thee,
Absolve a Father's vow, to this fair Virgin :
A vow, which hopes of having such a Son
First caus'd.

Leon. Show not my disobedience by your pray'rs,
For I must still deny you, though I now
Appear more guilty to my self, than you :
I have some reasons, which I cannot utter,
That force my disobedience ; yet I mourn

To death, that the first thing you e'r injoyn'd me,
Should be that onely one command in Nature
Which I could not obey.

Poly. I did descend too much below my self
When I intreated him. Hence, to thy Desart, Thou'rt not my son, or art not fit to be.

Amal. Great Sir, I humbly beg you, make not me [kneeling.
The cause of your displeasure. I absolve
Your vow: far, far from me, be such designs;
So wretched a desire of being great,
By making him unhappy. You may see
Something so noble in the Prince his nature,
As grieves him more not to obey, then you
That you are not obey'd.

Poly. ————— Then, for your sake,
I'll give him one day longer, to consider
Not to deny; for my resolves are firm
As Fate, that cannot change. [Exeunt King and Amal.

Leon. ————— And so are mine.
This beauteous Princess, charming as she is,
Could never make me happy: I must first
Be false to my Palmyra, and then wretched.
But, then, a Father's anger!
Suppose he should recede from his own vow,
He never would permit me to keep mine.

Enter Palmyra; Argaleon following her, a little after.

See, she appears!
I'll think no more of any thing, but her.
Yet I have one hour good ere I am wretched.
But, Oh! Argaleon follows her! so night
Treads on the foot-steps of a Winter's Sun,
And stalks all-black behind him.

Palm. ————— O Leonidas,
(For I must call you still by that dear name)
Free me from this bad man.

Leon. I hope he dares not be injurious to you.

Arga. I rather was injurious to my self,
Then her.

Leon. That must be judg'd when I hear what you said.

Arga. I think you need not give your self that trouble:
It concern'd us alone.

Leon. You answer sawcily, and indirectly:
What interest can you pretend in her?

Arga. It may be, Sir, I made her some expressions
Which I would not repeat, because they were Below my rank, to one of hers.

Leon. What did he say, Palmyra?

Palm. I'll tell you all: First, he began to look,
And then he sigh'd, and then he look'd again;
At last, he said my eyes wounded his heart:
And, after that, he talk'd of flames, and fires;
And such strange words, that I believ'd he conjur'd.

Leon. O my heart! Leave me, Argaleon.

Arga. Come, sweet Palmyra,
I will instruct you better in my meaning:
You see he would be private.

Leon. ————— Go your self,
And leave her here.

Arga. ————— Alas, she's ignorant,
And is not fit to entertain a Prince.

Leon. First learn what's fit for you; that's to obey.

Arga. I know my duty is to wait on you,
A great King's Son, like you, ought to forget
Such mean converse.

Leon. ————— What? a disputing Subject?
Hence; or my sword shall do me justice, on thee.

Arga. Yet I may find a time ————— (Going:

Leon. ————— What's that you mutter, [going after him.
To find a time?

Arga. ————— To wait on you again. —————
(Softly) In the mean while I'll watch you.

[Exit, and watches during the Scene.

Leon. How precious are the hours of Love in Courts!
In Cottages, where Love has all the day,

Full, and at ease, he throws it halfaway.
 Time gives himself, and is not valu'd, there;
 But sells, at mighty rates, each minute, here.
 There, he is lazy, unemploy'd, and slow;
 Here, he's more swift; and yet has more to do.
 So many of his hours in publick move,
 That few are left for privacy, and Love.

Palm. The Sun, methinks, shines faint and dimly, here;
 Light is not half so long, nor half so clear.
 But, Oh! when every day was yours and mine,
 How early up! what haste he made to shine!

Leon. Such golden days no Prince must hope to see;
 Whose ev'ry Subject is more blest'd then he.

Palm. Do you remember, when their talks were done,
 How all the Youth did to our Cottage run?
 While winter-winds were whistling loud without,
 Our chearful hearth was circled round about:
 With strokes in ashes Maids their Lovers drew;
 And still you fell to me, and I to you.

Leon. When Love did of my heart possession take,
 I was so young, my soul was scarce awake:
 I cannot tell when first I thought you fair;
 But suck'd in Love, insensibly as Ayre.

Palm. I know too well when first my love began,
 When, at our Wake, you for the Chaplet ran:
 Then I was made the Lady of the May,
 And, with the Garland, at the Goal did stay:
 Still, as you ran, I kept you full in view;
 I hop'd, and wish'd, and ran, methought, for you.
 As you came near, I hastily did rise,
 And stretch'd my arm out-right, that held the prize.
 The custom was to kiss whom I should crown:
 You kneel'd; and, in my lap, your head laid down,
 I blush'd, and blush'd, and did the kiss delay:
 At last, my Subjects forc'd me to obey;
 But, when I gave the Crown, and then the kiss,
 I scarce had breath to say, Take that——and this.

Leon. I felt, the while, a pleasing kind of smart;

The kifs went, tingling, to my very heart.
 When it was gone, the fense of it did ftay;
 The fweetnefs cling'd upon my lips all day,
 Like drops of Honey, loath to fall away.

Palm. Life, like a prodigal, gave all his ftore
 To my firft youth, and now can give no more.
 You are a Prince; and, in that high degree,
 No longer muft converse with humble me.

Leon. 'Twas to my lofs the Gods that title gave;
 A Tyrant's Son is doubly born a Slave:
 He gives a Crown; but, to prevent my life
 From being happy, loads it with a Wife.

Palm. Speak quickly; what have you resolv'd to do?

Leon. To keep my faith inviolate to you.
 He threatens me with exile, and with fhame,
 To lofe my birth-right, and a Prince his name;
 But there's a blessing which he did not mean,
 To fend me back to Love and You again.

Palm. Why was not I a Princess for your fake?
 But Heav'n no more fuch miracles can make:
 And, fince That cannot, This muft never be;
 You fhall not lofe a Crown for love of me.
 Live happy, and a nobler choice purfue;
 I fhall complain of Fate; but not of you.

Leon. Can you fo eafily without me live?
 Or could you take the counfel which you give?
 Were you a Princess would you not be true?

Palm. I would; but cannot merit it from you.

Leon. Did you not merit, as you do, my heart;
 Love gives efteem; and then it gives defert.
 But if I bafely could forget my vow,
 Poor helpiefs Innocence, what would you do?

Palm. In Woods, and Plains, where firft my love began,
 There would I live, retir'd from faithlefs man:
 I'd fit all day within fome lonely fhade,
 Or that clofe Arbour which your hands have made:
 I'd fearch the Groves, and ev'ry Tree, to find
 Where you had carv'd our names upon the rind:

Your

Your Hook, your Scrip, all that was yours, I'd keep,
And lay 'em by me when I went to sleep.

Thus would I live: and Maidens, when I die,
Upon my Hearse white True-love-knots should tie:
And thus my Tomb should be inscrib'd above,
Here the forsaken Virgin rests from love.

Leon. Think not that time or fate shall e'r divide
Those hearts, which Love and mutual Vows have ty'd:
But we must part; farewell, my Love.

Palm. _____ Till when?

Leon. Till the next age of hours we meet again,
Mean time _____ we may
When near each other we in publick stand,
Contrive to catch a look, or steal a hand:
Fancy will every touch, and glance improve;
And draw the most spirituous parts of Love.
Our souls sit close, and silently within;
And their own Web from their own Intrals spin.
And when eyes meet far off, our sense is such,
That, Spider-like; we feel the tender'st touch.

[Exeunt.]

ACT III. SCENE I.

Enter Rhodophil, meeting Doralice and Artemis.

Rhodophil and Doralice embrace.

Rho. MY own dear heart!
Dor. My own true love! [She starts back.]

I had forgot my self to be so kind; indeed I am very angry with you, dear; you are come home an hour after you appointed: If you had staid a minute longer, I was just considering, whether I should stab, hang, or drown my self.

[Embracing him.]

Rho. Nothing but the King's business could have hinder'd me; and I was so vext, that I was just laying down my Commission,

mission, rather than have fail'd my Dear. [Kissing her hand.

Arte. Why, this is love as it should be, betwixt Man and Wife: such another Couple would bring Marriage into fashion again. But is it always thus betwixt you?

Rho. Always thus! this is nothing. I tell you there is not such a pair of Turtles in all Sicily; there is such an eternal Cooing and kissing betwixt us, that indeed it is scandalous before civil company.

Dor. Well, if I had imagin'd, I should have been this fond fool, I would never have marri'd the man I lov'd: I marri'd to be happy; and have made my self miserable, by over-loving. Nay, and now, my case is desperate; for I have been marry'd above these two years, and find my self every day worse and worse in love: nothing but madness can be the end on't.

Arte. Doat on, to the extremity, and you are happy.

Dor. He deserves so infinitely much, that, the truth is, there can be no doating in the matter; but to love well, I confess, is a work that pays it self: 'tis telling gold, and after taking it for ones pains.

Rho. By that I should be a very covetous person; for I am ever pulling out my money, and putting it into my pocket again.

Dor. O dear Rhodophil!

Rho. O sweet Doralice!

[Embracing each other.

Arte. (Aside) Nay, I am resolv'd, I'll never interrupt Lovers: I'll leave 'em as happy as I found 'em.

[Steals away.

Rho. What, is she gone?

[Looking up.

Dor. Yes; and without taking leave.

Rho. Then there's enough for this time

[Parting from her.

Dor. Yes sure, the Scene's done, I take it.

They walk contrary ways on the Stage; he, with his hands in his pocket, whistling: she, singing a dull melancholly Tune.

Rho. Pox o' your dull tune, a man can't think for you.

Dor. Pox o' your damn'd whistling; you can neither be company to me your self, nor leave me to the freedom of my own fancy.

Rho. Well, thou art the most provoking Wife!

Dor. Well, thou art the dullest Husband; thou art never to be provok'd,

Rho. I was never thought dull, till I marry'd thee; and now thou hast made an old knife of me, thou hast whetted me so long, till I have no edge left.

Dor. I see you are in the Husbands fashion; you reserve all your good humours for your Mistresses, and keep your ill for your wives.

Rho. Prethee leave me to my own cogitations; I am thinking over all my sins, to find for which of them it was I marry'd thee.

Dor. Whatever your sin was, mine's the punishment.

Rho. My comfort is, thou art not immortal; and when that blessed, that divine day comes, of thy departure, I'm resolv'd I'll make one Holy-day more in the Almanack, for thy sake.

Dor. Ay, you had need make a Holy-day for me, for I am sure you have made me a Martyr.

Rho. Then, setting my victorious foot upon thy head, in the first hour of thy silence, (that is, the first hour thou art dead, for I despair of it before) I will swear by thy Ghost, an oath as terrible to me, as Styx is to the Gods, never more to be in danger of the Banes of Matrimony.

Dor. And I am resolv'd to marry the very same day thou dy'st, if it be but to show how little I'm concern'd for thee.

Rho. Prethee, Doralice, why do we quarrel thus a-days? ha? this is but a kind of Heathenish life, and does not answer the ends of marriage. If I have err'd, propound what reasonable atonement may be made, before we sleep, and I shall not be refractory: but withall consider, I have been marry'd these three years, and be not too tyrannical.

Dor. What should you talk of a peace abed, when you can give no security for performance of Articles?

Rho. Then, since we must live together, and both of us stand upon our terms, as to matter of dying first, let us make our selves as merry as we can with our misfortunes.

Why there's the devil on't! if thou couldst make my enjoying thee but a little less-easie, or a little more unlawful, thou shouldst see, what a Termagant Lover I would prove. I have taken such pains to enjoy thee, Doralice, that I have fanci'd thee all the fine women in the Town, to help me out. But now there's none left for me to think on, my imagination is quite jaded. Thou art a Wife, and thou wilt be a Wife, and I can make thee another no longer. [Exit Rhodophil.

Dor. Well, since thou art a Husband, and wilt be a Husband, I'll try if I can find out another! 'Tis a pretty time we Women have on't, to be made Widows, while we are marry'd. Our Husbands think it reasonable to complain, that we are the same, and the same to them, when we have more reason to complain, that they are not the same to us. Because they cannot feed on one dish, therefore we must be starv'd. 'Tis enough that they have a sufficient Ordinary provided, and a Table ready spread for 'em: if they cannot fall too and eat heartily, the fault is theirs; and 'tis pity, me-thinks, that the good creature should be lost, when many a poor sinner would be glad on't.

Enter Melantha, and Artemis to her.

Mel. Dear, my dear, pity me; I am so chagrin to day, and have had the most signal affront at Court! I went this afternoon to do my devoir to Princess Amalthea, found her, convers'd with her, and help'd to make her court some half an hour; after which, she went to take the ayr, chose out two Ladies to go with her, that came in after me, and left me most barbarously behind her.

Arte. You are the less to be piti'd, Melantha, because you subject your self to these affronts, by coming perpetually to Court, where you have no business nor employment.

Mel. I declare, I had rather of the two, be railly'd, nay, mal traittée at Court, then be Deifi'd in the Town: for, assuredly, nothing can be so ridicule, as a meer Town-Lady.

Dor. Especially at Court. How I have seen 'em crowd and sweat in the Drawing-room, on a Holiday-night! for that's their time to swarm, and invade the Presence. O, how they catch at a bow; or any little salute from a Courtier, to make show of their acquaintance! and rather than be thought to be quite unknown, they court'ie to one another; but they take true pains to come near the Circle, and press and peep upon the Princess, to write Letters into the Countrey how she was dress'd, while the Ladies that stand about make their court to her with abusing them.

F. their

Arte. These are sad truths, Melantha; and therefore I would e'en advise you to quit the Court, and live either wholly in the Town; or, if you like not that, in the Countrey.

Dor. In the Countrey! nay, that's to fall beneath the Town; for they live there upon our offals here: their entertainment of wit, is onely the remembrance of what they had when they were last in Town; they live this year upon the last years knowledge, as their Cattel do all night, by chewing the Cud of what they eat in the afternoon.

Mel. And they tell, for news, such unlikely stories; a letter from one of us is such a present to 'em, that the poor souls wait for the Carriers-day with such devotion, that they cannot sleep the night before.

Arte. No more than I can, the night before I am to go a journey.

Dor. Or I, before I am to try on a new Gown.

Mel. A Song that's stale here, will be new there a twelve-moneth hence; and if a man of the Town by chance come amongst 'em, he's reverenced for teaching 'em the Tune.

Dor. A friend of mine, who makes Songs sometimes, came lately out of the West, and vow'd he was so put out of count'nance with a Song of his; for at the first Countrey-Gentleman's he visited, he saw three Tailors cross-leg'd upon the Table in the Hall, who were tearing out as loud as ever they could sing, and all that day he heard nothing else, but the Daughters of the house and the Maids, humming it over in every corner, and the Father whistling it.

————— After the pangs of a desperate Lover, &c.

Arte.

Arte. Indeed I have observ'd of my self, that when I am out of Town but a fortnight, I am so humble, that I would receive a Letter from my Tailor or Mercer for a favour.

Mel. When I have been at grass in the Summer, and am new come up again, methinks I'm to be turn'd into ridicule by all that see me; but when I have been once or twice at Court, I begin to value my self again, and to despise my Countrey-acquaintance.

Arte. There are places where all people may be ador'd, and we ought to know our selves so well as to chuse 'em.

Dor. That's very true; your little Courtiers wife, who speaks to the King but once a moneth, need but go to a Town-Lady; and there she may vapour, and cry, The King and I, at every word. Your Town-Lady, who is laugh'd at in the Circle, takes her Coach into the City, and there she's call'd your Honour, and has a Banquet from the Merchants Wife, whom she laughs at for her kindness. And, as for my finical Cit, she removes but to her Countrey-house, and there insults over the Countrey Gentlewoman that never comes up; who treats her with Frumity and Custard, and opens her dear bottle of Mirabilis beside, for a Jill-glass of it at parting.

Arte. At last, I see, we shall leave Melantha where we found her; for, by your description of the Town and Countrey, they are become more dreadful to her, then the Court, where she was affronted. But you forget we are to wait on the Princess Amalthea. Come, Doralice.

Dor. Farewell, Melantha.

Mel. Adieu, my dear.

Arte. You are out of charity with her, and therefore I shall not give your service.

Mel. Do not omit it, I beseech you; for I have such a tender for the Court, that I love it ev'n from the Drawing-room to the Lobby, and can never be rebutée by any usage. But, hark you, my Dears, one thing I had forgot of great conserment.

Dor. Quickly then, we are in haste.

Mel. Do not call it my service, that's too vulgar; but do my baïse mains to the Princess Amalthea; that is Spirituelle!

Dor. To do you service then, we will prendre the Carrosse to Court, and do your Baise mains to the Princess Amalthea, in your phrase spirituellé. [Exeunt Artemis and Doralice.]

Enter Philotis, with a Paper in her hand.

Mel. O, are you there, Minion? And, well, are not you a most precious damsel, to retard all my visits for want of language, when you know you are paid so well for furnishing me with new words for my daily conversation? Let me die, if I have not run the risque already, to speak like one of the vulgar; and if I have one phrase left in all my store that is not thrud-bare & usé, and fit for nothing but to be thrown to Peasants.

Phil. Indeed, Madam, I have been very diligent in my vocation; but you have so drain'd all the French Plays and Romances, that they are not able to supply you with words for your daily expences.

Mel. Drain'd? what a word's there!

Epuisée, you sot you. Come, produce your morning's work.

Phil. 'Tis here, Madam.

[Shows the Paper.]

Mel. O, my Venus! fourteen or fifteen words to serve me a whole day! Let me die, at this rate I cannot last till night. Come, read your works: twenty to one half of 'em will not pass muster neither.

Phil. Sottises.

[Reads.]

Mel. Sottises: bon. That's an excellent word to begin with-all: as for example; He, or she said a thousand Sottises to me. Proceed.

Phil. Figure: as what a figure of a man is there!

Naive, and Naiveté.

Mel. Naive! as how?

Phil. Speaking of a thing that was naturally said; It was so naive: or such an innocent piece of simplicity; 'twas such a naiveté.

Mel. Truce with your interpretations: make haste.

Phil. Foible, Chagrin, Grimace, Embarrasse, Double entendre, Equivoque, Esclaircissement, Suitté, Bevue, Façon, Panchant, Coup d'etourdy, and Ridicule.

Mel.

Mel. Hold, hold; how did they begin?

Phil. They began at Sottises, and ended in Ridicule.

Mel. Now give me your Paper in my hand, and hold you my Glass, while I practise my postures for the day.

[Melanthis laughs in the Glass.]

How does that laugh become my face?

Phil. Sovereignly well, Madam.

Mel. Sovereignly! Let me die, that's not amiss. That word shall not be yours; I'll invent it, and bring it up my self: my new Point Gorget shall be yours upon't: not a word of the word, I charge you.

Phil. I am dumb, Madam.

Mel. That glance, how futes it with my face?

[Looking in the Glass again.]

Phil. 'Tis so languissant.

Mel. Languissant! that word shall be mine too, and my last Indian-Gown thine for't.

That sigh?

[Looks again:]

Phil. 'Twill make many a man sigh, Madam. 'Tis a meer Incendiary.

Mel. Take my Guimp Petticoat for that truth. If thou hast more of these phrases, let me die but I could give away all my Wardrobe, and go naked for'em.

Phil. Go naked? then you would be a Venus, Madam. O Jupiter! what had I forgot? this Paper was given me by Rhodophil's Page.

Mel. (Reading the Letter) ——— Beg the favour from you. ——— Gratifie my passion ——— so far ——— assignation ——— in the Grotto ——— behind the Terras ——— clock this evening ——— Well, for the Billets doux there's no man in Sicily must dispute with Rhodophil; they are so French, so gallant, and so tendre, that I cannot resist the temptation of the assignation. Now go you away, Philotis; it imports me to practise what I shall say to my Servant when I meet him.

[Exit Philotis.]

Rhodophil, you'll wonder at my assurance to meet you here; let me die, I am so out of breath with coming, that I can render you no reason of it. Then he will make this repartee; Madam,

Madam, I have no reason to accuse you for that which is so great a favour to me. Then I reply, But why have you drawn me to this solitary place? let me die but I am apprehensive of some violence from you. Then, says he; Solitude, Madam, is most fit for Lovers; but by this fair hand——— Nay, now I vow you're rude. Sir. O fie, fie, fie; I hope you'll be honourable? —— You'd laugh at me if I should, Madam.—— What do you mean to throw me down thus? Ah me! ah, ah, ah:

Enter Polydamas, Leonidas, and Guards.

O Venus! the King and Court. Let me die but I fear they have found my foible, and will turn me into ridicule.

[Exit running.]

Leon. Sir, I beseech you.

Poly. —— Do not urge my patience.

Leon. I'll not deny

But what your Spies inform'd you of, is true :
I love the fair Palmyra; but I lov'd her
Before I knew your title to my blood.

Enter Palmyra, guarded.

See, here she comes; and looks, amid't her Guards,
Like a weak Dove under the Falcon's gripe.
O heav'n, I cannot bear it.

Poly. —— Maid, come hither.

Have you presum'd so far, as to receive
My Son's affection?

Palm. Alas, what shall I answer? to confess it
Will raise a blush upon a Virgin's face;
Yet I was ever taught 'twas base to lie.

Poly. You've been too bold, and you must love no more.

Palm. Indeed I must; I cannot help my love;
I was so tender when I took the bent,
That now I grow that way.

Poly. He is a Prince; and you are meanly born.

Leon. Love either finds equality, or makes it:

Like

Marriage a-la-Mode.

39

Like death, he knows no difference in degrees,
But plains, and levels all.

Palm. Alas, I had not render'd up my heart,
Had he not lov'd me first; but he prefer'd me
Above the Maidens of my age and rank;
Still shun'd their company, and still fought mine;
I was not won by gifts, yet still he gave;
And all his gifts, though small, yet spoke his love.
He pick'd the earliest Strawberries in Woods,
The cluster'd Filberds, and the purple Grapes;
He taught a prating Stare to speak my name;
And when he found a Nest of Nightingales,
Or callow Linnets, he would show 'em me,
And let me take 'em out.

Poly. This is a little Mist'ris, meanly born,
Fit onely for a Prince his vacant hours,
And then, to laugh at her simplicity,
Not fix a passion there. Now hear my sentence.

Leon. Remember, ere you give it, 'tis pronounc'd Against us both.

Poly. First, in her hand
There shall be plac'd a Player's painted Sceptre,
And, on her head, a gilded Pageant Crown;
Thus shall she go,
With all the Boys attending on her Triumph:
That done, be put alone into a Boat,
With bread and water onely for three days,
So on the Sea she shall be set adrift,
And who relieves her, dies.

Palm. I onely beg that you would execute
The last part first: let me be put to Sea;
The bread and water, for my three days life,
I give you back, I would not live so long;
But let me scape the shame.

Leon. Look to me, Piety; and you, O Gods, look to my piety:
Keep me from saying that which misbecomes a son;
But let me die before I see this done.

Poly. If you for ever will abjure her sight,

I can be yet a father ; she shall live.

Leon. Hear, O you Pow'rs, is this to be a father ?

I see 'tis all my happiness and quiet

You aim at, Sir ; and take 'em :

I will not save ev'n my Palmyra's life

At that ignoble price ; but I'll die with her.

Palm. So had I done by you,

Had Fate made me a Princess : Death, methinks,

Is not a terrour now ;

He is not fierce, or grim, but fawns, and soothes me,

And slides along, like Cleopatra's Aspick,

Offering his service to my troubled breast.

Leon. Begin what you have purpos'd when you please,

Lead her to scorn, your triumph shall be doubled.

As holy Priests

In pity go with dying malefactours,

So will I share her shame.

Poly. You shall not have your will so much ; first part 'em,
Then execute your office.

Leon. _____ No ; I'll die

In her defence.

[Draws his sword.

Palm. _____ Ah, hold, and pull not on

A curse, to make me worthy of my death :

Do not by lawless force oppose your Father,

Whom you have too much disobey'd for me.

Leon. Here, take it, Sir, and with it, pierce my heart :

[Presenting his sword to his father upon his knees.

You have done more, in taking my Palmyra.

You are my Father, therefore I submit.

Poly. Keep him from any thing he may design

Against his life, whil'st the first fury lasts ;

And now perform what I commanded you.

Leon. In vain ; if sword and poison be deny'd me,

I'll hold my breath and die.

Palm. Farewell, my last Leonidas ; yet live,

I charge you live, till you believe me dead.

I cannot die in peace, if you die first.

If life's a blessing, you shall have it last.

Poly.

Marriage a-la-Mode.

41

Poly. Go on with her, and lead him after me.

Enter Argaleon hastily, with Hermogenes.

Arga. I bring you, Sir, such news as must amaze you,
And such as will prevent you from an action
Which would have rendred all your life unhappy.

Poly. Hermogenes, you bend your knees in vain,

[Hermogenes kneels.

My doom's already past.

Her. I kneel not for Palmyra; for I know

She will not need my pray'rs; but for my self:

With a feign'd tale I have abus'd your ears,

And therefore merit death; but since, unforc'd,

I first accuse my self, I hope your mercy.

Poly. Hasten to explain your meaning.

Her. Then, in few words, Palmyra is your daughter.

Poly. How can I give belief to this Impostor?

He who has once abus'd me, often may.

I'll hear no more.

Arga. _____ For your own sake, you must.

Her. A parent's love (for I confess my crime)

Mov'd me to say, Leonidas was yours;

But when I heard Palmyra was to die,

The fear of guiltless blood so stung my conscience,

That I resolv'd, ev'n with my shame, to save

Your daughter's life.

Poly. But how can I be certain, but that interest,

Which mov'd you first to say your son was mine,

Does not now move you too, to save your daughter?

Her. You had but then my word; I bring you now

Authentick testimonies. Sir, in short,

[Delivers on his knees a Jewel, and a Letter.

If this will not convince you, let me suffer.

Poly. I know this Jewel well; 'twas once my mothers,

[Looking first on the Jewel.

Which, marrying, I presented to my wife.

And this, O this, is my Endocia's hand.

*This was the pledge of love given to Eudocia, [Reads:
Who, dying, to her young Palmyra leaves it :*

*And this when you, my dearest Lord, receive,
Own her, and think on me, dying Eudocia.*

*Take it ; 'tis well there is no more to read, [To Argaleon:
My eyes grow full, and swim in their own light.*

[He embraces Palmyra.]

Palm. I fear, Sir, this is your intended Pageant.

You sport your self at poor Palmyra's cost ;

But if you think to make me proud,

Indeed I cannot be so : I was born

With humble thoughts, and lowly, like my birth.

A real fortune could not make me haughty,

Much less a feign'd.

Poly. ———— This was her mother's temper.

I have too much deserv'd thou shouldst suspect

That I am not thy father ; but my love

Shall henceforth show I am. Behold my eyes,

And see a father there begin to flow :

This is not feign'd, Palmyra.

Palm. I doubt no longer, Sir ; you are a King,

And cannot lie : falshood's a vice too base

To find a room in any Royal breast ;

I know, in spite of my unworthiness,

I am your child ; for when you would have kill'd me,

Methought I lov'd you then.

Arga. Sir, we forget the Prince Leonidas,

His greatness should not stand neglected thus.

Poly. Guards, you may now retire : Give him his sword,

And leave him free.

Leon. Then the first use I make of liberty

Shall be, with your permission, mighty Sir,

To pay that reverence to which Nature binds me.

[kneels to Hermogenes.]

Arga. Sure you forget your birth, thus to misplace

This act of your obedience ; you should kneel

To nothing but to Heav'n, and to a King.

Leon. I never shall forget what Nature owes,

Nor be aſham'd to pay it ; though my father
Be not a King, I know him brave and honeſt,
And well deſerving of a worthier ſon.

Poly. He bears it gallantly.

Leon. Why would you not inſtruct me, Sir, before [To Herms.
Where I ſhould place my duty ?

From which, if ignorance have made me ſwerve,
I beg your pardon for an erring ſon.

Palm. I almoſt grieve I am a Princeſs, ſince
It makes him loſe a Crown.

Leon. And next, to you, my King, thus low I kneel,
T' implore your mercy ; if in that ſmall time

I had the honour to be thought your ſon,

I pay'd not ſtrict obedience to your will :

I thought, indeed, I ſhould not be compell'd,

But thought it as your ſon ; ſo what I took

In duty from you, I reſtor'd in courage ;

Be cauſe your ſon ſhould not be forc'd.

Poly. You have my pardon for it.

Leon. To you, fair Princeſs, I congratulate
Your birth ; of which I ever thought you worthy :

And give me leave to add, that I am proud

The Gods have pick'd me out to be the man

By whoſe dejected fate yours is to riſe ;

Be cauſe no man could more deſire your fortune,

Or franklier part with his to make you great.

Palm. I know the King, though you are not his ſon,

Will ſtill regard you as my Foſter-brother,

And ſo conduct you downward from a Throne,

By ſlow degrees, ſo unperceiv'd and ſoft,

That it may ſeem no fall : or, if it be,

May Fortune lay a bed of down beneath you.

Poly. He ſhall be rank'd with my Nobility,

And kept from ſcorn by a large penſion giv'n him.

Leon. You are all great and Royal in your gifts ; [Bow'ng.

But at the Donor's feet I lay 'em down :

Should I take riches from you, it would ſeem

As I did want a ſoul to bear that poverty

To which the Gods design'd my humble birth:
 And should I take your Honours without merit,
 It would appear, I wanted manly courage
 To hope 'em, in your service, from my sword.

Poly. Still brave, and like your self.

The Court shall shine this night in its full splendour,
 And celebrate this new discovery.

Argalcon, lead my daughter: as we go

I shall have time to give her my commands,

In which you are concern'd.

[Exeunt all but Leonidas.]

Leon. Methinks I do not want

That huge long train of fawning followers,

That swept a furlong after me.

'Tis true, I am alone;

So was the Godhead ere he made the world,

And better serv'd Himself, then serv'd by Nature.

And yet I have a Soul

Above this humble fate. I could command,

Love to do good; give largely to true merit;

All that a King should do: But though these are not

My Province, I have Scene enough within

To exercise my vertue.

All that a heart, so fix'd as mine, can move,

Is, that my niggard fortune starves my love.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.

Palamede and Doralice meet: she with a Book in her hand, seems to start at sight of him.

Dor. 'TIS a strange thing that no warning will serve your turn; and that no retirement will secure me from your impertinent addresses! Did not I tell you, that I was to be private here at my devotions?

Pala. Yes; and you see I have observ'd my Cue exactly: I am come to relieve you from them. Come, shut up, shut up your Book; the man's come who is to supply all your necessities.

Dor:

Dor. Then, it seems, you are so impudent to think it was an assignation? this, I warrant, was your lewd interpretation of my innocent meaning.

Pala. Venus forbid that I should harbour so unreasonable a thought of a fair young Lady, that you should lead me hither into temptation. I confess I might think indeed it was a kind of honourable challenge, to meet privately without Seconds, and decide the difference betwixt the two Sexes; but heaven forgive me if I thought amiss.

Dor. You thought too, I'll lay my life on't, that you might as well make love to me, as my Husband does to your Mistress.

Pala. I was so unreasonable to think so too.

Dor. And then you wickedly infer'd, that there was some justice in the revenge of it: or at least but little injury; for a man to endeavour to enjoy that, which he accounts a blessing, and which is not valu'd as it ought by the dull possessour. Confess your wickedness, did you not think so?

Pala. I confess I was thinking so, as fast as I could; but you think so much before me, that you will let me think nothing.

Dor. 'Tis the very thing that I design'd: I have forestall'd all your arguments, and left you without a word more, to plead for mercy. If you have any thing farther to offer, ere Sentence pass—— Poor Animal, I brought you hither onely for my diversion.

Pala. That you may have, if you'll make use of me the right way; but I tell thee, woman, I am now past talking.

Dor. But it may be, I came hither to hear what fine things you could say for your self.

Pala. You would be very angry, to my knowledge, if I should lose so much time to say many of 'em—— By this hand you would——

Dor. Fie, Palamede, I am a woman of honour.

Pala. I see you are; you have kept touch with your assignation: and before we part, you shall find that I am a man of honour—— yet I have one scruple of conscience——

Dor. I warrant you will not want some naughty argument or other to satisfy your self—— I hope you are afraid of betraying your friend?

Pala. Of betraying my friend! I am more afraid of being betray'd by you to my friend. You women now are got into the way of telling first your selves: a man who has any care of his reputation will be loath to trust it with you.

Dor. O you charge your faults upon our Sex: you men are like Cocks, you never make love, but you clap your wings, and crow when you have done.

Pala. Nay, rather you women are like Hens; you never lay, but you cackle an hour after, to discover your Nest—— But I'll venture it for once.

Dor. To convince you that you are in the wrong, I'll retire into the dark Grotto, to my devotion, and make so little noise, that it shall be impossible for you to find me.

Pala. But if I find you——

Dor. Ay, if you find me—— But I'll put you to search in more corners than you imagine.

[She runs in, and he after her.

Enter Rhodophil and Melantha.

Mel. Let me die, but this solitude, and that Grotto are scandalous; I'll go no further; besides, you have a sweet Lady of your own.

Rho. But a sweet Mistress, now and then, makes my sweet Lady so much more sweet.

Mel. I hope you will not force me?

Rho. But I will, if you desire it.

Pala. (Within) Where the devil are you, Madam? S' death, I begin to be weary of this hide and seek: if you stay a little longer, till the fit's over, I'll hide in my turn, and put you to the finding me.

[He enters, and sees Rhodophil and Melantha.

How! Rhodophil, and my Mistress!

Mel. My servant to apprehend me! this is Surprenant au dernier.

Rho. I must on; there's nothing but impudence can help me out.

Pala. Rhodophil, How came you hither in so good company?

Rho.

Rho. As you see, Palamede; an effect of pure friendship; I was not able to live without you.

Pala. But what makes my Mistris with you?

Rho. Why, I heard you were here alone, and could not in civility but bring her to you.

Mel. You'll pardon the effects of a passion which I may now avow for you, if it transported me beyond the rules of bien seance.

Pala. But who told you I was here? they that told you that, may tell you more, for ought I know.

Rho. O, for that matter, we had intelligence.

Pala. But let me tell you, we came hither so very privately, that you could not trace us.

Rho. Us? what us? you are alone.

Pala. Us! the devil's in me for mistaking: me, I meant. Or us; that is, you are me, or I you, as we are friends: that's us.

Dor. Palamede, Palamede [Within.

Rho. I should know that voice? who's within there, that calls you?

Pala. Faith I can't imagine; I believe the place is haunted.

Dor. Palamede, Palamede, All-cockshidden. [Within.

Pala. Lord, lord, what shall I do? Well, dear friend, to let you see I scorn to be jealous, and that I dare trust my Mistris with you, take her back, for I would not willingly have her frightened, and I am resolv'd to see who's there; I'll not be danted with a Bug-bear, that's certain: prethee dispute it not, it shall be so; nay, do not put me to swear, but go quickly: there's an effect of pure friendship for you now.

Enter Doralice, and looks amaz'd, seeing them.

Rho. Doralice! I am thunder-struck to see you here.

Pala. So am I! quite thunder-struck. Was it you that call'd me within? (I must be impudent.)

Rho. How came you hither, Spouse?

Pala. Ay, how came you hither? And, which is more, how could you be here without my knowledge?

Dor. (To her husband) O, Gentleman, have I caught you i' faith! have have I broke forth in ambush upon you! I thought my suspicions would prove true.

Rho. Suspicions! this is very fine, Spouse! Prethee what suspicions?

Dor. O, you feign ignorance: why, of you and Melantha; here have I staid these two hours, waiting with all the rage of a passionate, loving wife, but infinitely jealous, to take you two in the manner; for hither I was certain you would come.

Rho. But you are mistaken, Spouse, in the occasion; for we came hither on purpose to find Palamede, on intelligence he was gone before.

Pala. I'll be hang'd then if the same party who gave you intelligence, I was here, did not tell your wife you would come hither: now I smell the malice, on't on both sides.

Dor. Was it so, think you? nay, then, I'll confess my part of the malice too. As soon as ever I spi'd my husband and Melantha come together, I had a strange temptation to make him jealous in revenge; and that made me call Palamede, Palamede, as though there had been an Intrigue between us.

Mel. Nay, I avow, there was an apparence of an Intrigue betweenustoo.

Pala. To see how things will come about!

Rho. And was it onely thus, my dear Doralice? [Embraces.

Dor. And did I wrong none, Rhodophil, with a false suspicion? [Embracing him.

Pala. (Aside) Now am I confident we had all four the same design; 'tis a pretty odd kind of game this, where each of us plays for double stakes: this is just thrust and parry with the same motion; I am to get his Wife, and yet to guard my own Mistress. But I am vilely suspicious, that, while I conquer in the Right Wing, I shall be routed in the Left: for both our women will certainly betray their party, because they are each of them for gaining of two, as well as we; and I much fear,

If their necessities and ours were known,

They have more need of two, then we of one.

[Exit, embracing one another.

ACT IV. SCENE I.

Enter Leonidas, musing, Amalthea following him.

Amal. Yonder he is, and I must speak, or die;
 And yet 'tis death to speak; yet he must know
 I have a passion for him, and may know it
 With a less blush; because to offer it
 To his low fortunes, shows I lov'd before,
 His person, not his greatness.

Leon. First scorn'd, and now commanded from the Court!
 The King is good; but he is wrought to this
 By proud Argaleon's malice.
 What more disgrace can Love and Fortune joyn
 T' inflict upon one man? I cannot now
 Behold my dear Palmyra: she, perhaps, too
 Is grown ashamed of a mean ill-plac'd love.

Amal. Assist me, Venus, for I tremble when I am to speak, but I must force my self. [Aside.
 Sir, I would crave but one short minute with you, [To him.
 And some few words.

Leon. ———— The proud Argaleon's sister! [Aside.

Amal. Alas, it will not out; shame stops my mouth. [Aside.
 Pardon my error, Sir, I was mistaken,
 And took you for another.

Leon. In spite of all his guards, I'll see Palmyra; [Aside.
 Though meanly born, I have a Kingly Soul yet.

Amal. I stand upon a precipice, where fain [Aside.
 I would retire, but Love still thrusts me on:
 Now I grow bolder, and will speak to him.
 Sir, 'tis indeed to you that I would speak, [To him.
 And if ————

Leon. O, you are sent to scorn my fortunes;

Your Sex and Beauty are your priviledge;
But should your Brother————

Amal. Now he looks angry, and I dare not speak.

I had some business with you, Sir,
But 'tis not worth your knowledge.

Leon. Then 'twill be charity to let me mourn.

My griefs alone, for I am much disorder'd.

Amal. 'Twill be more charity to mourn 'em with you:

Heav'n knows I pity you.

Leon.————— Your pity, Madam,

Is generous, but 'tis unavailable.

Amal. You know not till 'tis tri'd.

Your sorrows are no secret; you have lost
A Crown, and Mistris.

Leon.————— Are not these enough?

Hang two such weights on any other soul,
And see if it can bear 'em.

Amal. More; you are banish'd, by my Brother's means,

And ne'r must hope again to see your Princess;

Except as Pris'ners view fair Walks and Streets,

And careless Passengers going by their grates,

To make 'em feel the want of liberty.

But, worse then all,

The King this morning has injoyn'd his Daughter

To accept my Brother's love.

Leon.————— Is this your pity?

You aggravate my griefs, and print 'em deeper

In new and heavier stamps.

Amal. 'Tis as Physicians show the desperate ill

'T'indear their Art, by mitigating pains

They cannot wholly cure: when you despair

Of all you wish, some part of it, because

Unhop'd for, may be grateful; and some other————

Leon. What other?

Amal. Some other may————

My shame again has seiz'd me, and I can go

No farther————

Leon. These often failing, sighs, and interruptions,

[Aside.

Make

Marriage a-la-Mode.

51

Make me imagine you have grief likemine :
Have you ne'r lov'd ?

Amal. _____ I ? never : 'tis in vain ;
I must despair in silence.

[Aside.

Leon. You come as I suspected then, to mock,
At least observe my griefs: take it not ill
That I must leave you.

[Is going.

Amal. You must not go with these unjust opinions.
Command my life, and fortunes; you are wise,
Think, and think well, what I can do to serve you.

Leon. I have but one thing in my thoughts and wishes:
If by your means I can obtain the sight
Of my ador'd Palmyra; or, what's harder,
One minutes time, to tell her, I die hers.
I see I am not to expect it from you;
Nor could, indeed, with reason.

[She starts back.

Amal. Name any other thing: is Amalthea
So despicable, she can serve your wishes
In this alone ?

Leon. _____ If I should ask of heav'n,
I have no other suit.

Amal. To show you, then, I can deny you nothing,
Though 'tis more hard to me then any other,
Yet I will do't for you.

Leon. Name quickly, name the means, speak my good Angel.

Amal. Be not so much o'rjoy'd; for, if you are,
I'll rather dye then do't. This night the Court
Will bein Masquerade;
You shall attend on me; in that disguise
You may both see and speak to her,
If you dare venture it.

Leon. Yes, were a God her Guardian,
And bore in each hand thunder, I would venture.

Amal. Farewell then; two hours hence I will expect you:
My heart's so full, that I can stay no longer.

[Exit.

Leon. Already it grows dusky; I'll prepare
With haste for my disguise. But who are these ?

Marriage à-la-Mode.

Enter Hermogenes and Eubulus.

Her. 'Tis he; we need not fear to speak to him.

Eub. Leonidas.

Leonidas. ———— Sure I have known that voice.

Her. You have some reason, Sir; 'tis Eubulus,
Who bred you with the Princess; and, departing,
Bequeath'd you to my care.

Leon. My Foster, Father! let my knees express [Kneeling.
My joys for your return!

Eub. Rise, Sir, you must not kneel.

Leon. ———— E'r since you left me,
I have been wandering in a maze of fate,
Led by false fires of a fantastick glory,
And the vain lustre of imagin'd Crowns,
But, ah! why would you leave me? or how could you
Absent your self so long?

Eub. I'll give you a most just account of both:
And something more I have to tell you, which
I know must cause your wonder; but this place,
Though almost hid in darkness, is not safe.

Already I discern some coming towards us [Torches appear.
With lights, who may discover me. Hermogenes,
Your lodgings are hard by, and much more private.

Her. There you may freely speak.

Leon. ———— Let us make haste;
For some affairs, and of no small importance,
Call me another way. [Exeunt.

Enter Palamede and Rhodophil, with Vizor Masques in their hands, and Torches before'em.

Pala. We shall have noble sport to night, Rhodophil; this Masquerading is a most glorious invention.

Rho. I believe it was invented first by some jealous Lover, to discover the haunts of his Jilting Mistis; or, perhaps, by some distressed servant, to gain an opportunity with a jealous man's wife.

Pala.

Pala. No, it must be the invention of a woman, it has so much of subtilty and love in it.

Rho. I am sure 'tis extremely pleasant; for to go unknown, is the next degree to going invisible.

Pala. What with our antique habits, and feign'd voices, do you know me? and I know you? Methinks we move and talk just like so many over-grown Puppets.

Rho. Masquerade is onely Vizer-masque improv'd, a heightning of the same fashion.

Pala. No; Masquerade is Vizer-masque in debauch; and I like it the better for't: for, with a Vizer-masque, we fool our selves into courtship, for the sake of an eye that glanc'd; or a hand that stole it self out of the glove sometimes, to give us a sample of the skin: but in Masquerade there is nothing to be known, she's all Terra incognita, and the bold discoverer leaps ashoar, and takes his lot among the wild Indians and Salvages, without the vile consideration of safety to his person, or of beauty, or wholesomeness in his Mistress.

Enter Beliza.

Rho. Beliza, what make you here?

Bel. Sir, my Lady sent me after you, to let you know, she finds her self a little indispos'd, so that she cannot be at Court, but is retir'd to rest, in her own apartment, where she shall want the happiness of your dear embraces to night.

Rho. A very fine phrase, Beliza, to let me know my wife desires to lie alone.

Pala. I doubt, Rhodophil, you take the pains sometimes to instruct your wife's Woman in these elegancies.

Rho. Tell my dear Lady, that since I must be so unhappy as not to wait on her to night, I will lament bitterly for her absence. 'Tis true, I shall be at Court; but I will take no diversion there; and when I return to my solitary bed, if I am so forgetful of my passion as to sleep, I will dream of her; and betwixt sleep and waking, put out my foot towards her side, for mid-night consolation; and not finding her, I will sigh, and imagine my self a most desolate widower.

Bel.

Bel. I shall do your commands, Sir. [Exit.]

Rho. (Aside) She's sick as aptly for my purpose, as if she had contriv'd it so: well, if ever woman was a help-meet for man, my Spouse is so; for within this hour I receiv'd a Note from Melantha, that she would meet me this evening in Masquerade in Boys habit, to rejoyce with me before she entred into fetters; for I find she loves me better then Palamede, onely because he's to be her husband. There's something of antipathy in the word Marriage to the nature of love; marriage is the meer Ladle of affection, that cools it when 'tis never so fiercely boiling over.

Pala. Dear Rhodophil, I must needs beg your pardon; there is an occasion fall'n out which I had forgot: I cannot be at Court to night.

Rho. Dear Palamede, I am sorry we shall not have one course together at the herd; but I find your Game lies single: good fortune to you with your Mistris. [Exit.]

Pala. He has wish'd me good fortune with his Wife: there's no sin in this then, there's fair leave given. Well, I must go visit the sick; I cannot resist the temptations of my charity. O what a difference will she find betwixt a dull resty Husband, and a quick vigorous Lover! he sets out like a Carrier's Horse, plodding on, because he knows he must, with the Bells of Matrimony chiming so melancholly about his neck, in pain till he's at his journey's end, and despairing to get thither, he is fain to fortifie imagination with the thoughts of another woman: I, take heat after heat, like a well-breath'd Courser, and—— But hark, what noise is that? swords! [Clashing of Swords within.]

Nay, then have with you. [Exit Palamede.]

Re-enter Palamede, with Rhodophil: and Doralice in man's habit:

Rho. Friend, your relief was very timely, otherwise I had been oppress'd.

Pala. What was the quarrel?

Rho. What I did, was in rescue of this Youth:

Pala. What cause could he give 'em?

Dor. The cause was nothing but onely the common cause of

of fighting in Masquerades: they were drunk, and I was sober.

Rho. Have they not hurt you?

Dor. No; but I am exceeding ill, with the fright on't.

Pala. Let's lead him to some place where he may refresh himself.

Rho. Do you conduct him then.

Pala. (Aside) How cross this happens to my design of going to Doralice! for I am confident she was sick on purpose that I should visit her. Hark you, Rhodophil, could not you take care of the stripling? I am partly engag'd to night.

Rho. You know I have business: but come, Youth, if it must be so.

Dor. (To Rhodophil) No, good Sir, do not give your self that trouble; I shall be safer, and better pleas'd with your friend here.

Rho. Farewell then; once more I wish you a good adventure.

Pala. Damn this kindness! now must I be troubled with this young Rogue, and miss my opportunity with Doralice.

{ Exit Rhodophil alone,
{ Palamede with Doralice.

SCENE II.

Enter Polydamas.

Argaleon counsel'd well to banish him,
He has, I know not what,
Of greatness in his looks, and of high fate,
That almost awes me; but I fear my Daughter,
Who hourly moves me for him, and I mark'd
She sigh'd when I but nam'd Argaleon to her.
But see, the Maskers: hence my cares, this night,
At least take truce, and find me on my pillow.

Enter

Enter the Princess in Masquerade, with Ladies: at the other end, Argaleon and Gentlemen in Masquerade: then Leonidas leading Amalthea. The King sits. A Dance. After the Dance,

Amal. (To Leonidas) That's the Princess;
I saw the habit ere she put it on.

Leon. I know her by a thousand other signs,
She cannot hide so much Divinity.
Disguis'd, and silent, yet some graceful motion
Breaks from her, and shines round her like a Glory.

[Goes to Palmyra.

Amal. Thus she reveals her self, and knows it not:
Like Love's Dark-lantern I direct his steps,
And yet he sees not that which gives him light.

Palmyra. I know you; but, alas, Leonidas, [To Leonidas,
Why should you tempt this danger on your self?

Leon. Madam, you know me not, if you believe
I would not hazard greater for your sake:
But you, I fear, are chang'd.

Palmyra. No, I am still the same;
But there are many things became Palmyra
Which ill become the Princess.

Leon. ————— I ask nothing
Which Honour will not give you leave to grant:
One hours short audience, at my fathers house,
You cannot sure refuse me.

Palmyra. Perhaps I should, did I consult strict vertue;
But something must be given to Love and you.
When would you I should come?

Leon. This evening, with the speediest opportunity.
I have a secret to discover to you,
Which will surprize, and please you.

Palmyra. ————— 'Tis enough
Go now; for we may be observ'd and known:
I trust your honour; give me not occasion
To blame my self, or you.

Leon.

Leon. You never shall repent your good opinion.

[Kisses her hand, and Exit.]

Arga. I cannot be deceiv'd; that is the Princess:
One of her Maids betray'd the habit to me;
But who was he with whom she held discourse?
'Tis one she favours, for he kiss'd her hand.
Our shapes are like, our habits near the same:
She may mistake, and speak to me for him.
I am resolv'd, I'll satisfy my doubts,
Though to be more tormented.

[Exit.]

S O N G.

1.

Whil'st Alexis lay prest
In her Arms he lov'd best,
With his hands round her neck,
And his head on her breast,
He found the fierce pleasure too hasty to stay,
And his soul in the tempest just flying away.

2.

When Coelia saw this,
With a sigh, and a kiss,
She cry'd, Oh my dear, I am robb'd of my bliss;
'Tis unkind to your Love, and unfaithfully done,
To leave me behind you, and die all alone.

3.

The Youth, though in haste,
And breathing his last,
In pity dy'd slowly, while she dy'd more fast;
Till at length she cry'd, Now, my dear, now let us go,
Now die, my Alexis, and I will die too.

I

4. Thus

4.

*Thus intranc'd they did lie,
Till Alexis did try
To recover new breath, that again he might die:
Then often they di'd; but the more they did so,
The Nymph di'd more quick, and the Shepherd more slow.*

Another Dance. After it, Argaleon re-enters, and stands by the Princess.

Palm. Leonidas, what means this quick return? [To Argaleon.]

Argaleon. O heav'n! 'tis what I fear'd.

Palm. Is ought of moment happen'd since you went?

Argaleon. No, Madam, but I understood not fully Your last commands.

Palm. ———— And yet you answer'd to 'em.

Retire; you are too indiscreet a Lover:

I'll meet you where I promis'd.

[Exit.]

Argaleon. O my curst fortune! what have I discover'd?

But I will be reveng'd.

[Whispers to the King.]

Poly. But are you certain you are not deceiv'd?

Argaleon. Upon my life.

Poly. ———— Her honour is concern'd.

Somewhat I'll do; but I am yet distracted,

And know not where to fix. I wish'd a child,

And Heav'n, in anger, granted my request.

So blind we are, our wishes are so vain,

That what we most desire, proves most our pain.

[Exeunt omnes.]

SCENE

SCENE III.

An Eating-house. Bottles of Wine on the Table. Palamede ; and Doralice in Man's habit.

Dor. (Aside) Now cannot I find in my heart to discover my self, though I long he should know me.

Pala. I tell thee, Boy, now I have seen thee safe, I must be gone: I have no leisure to throw away on thy raw conversation: I am a person that understand better things, I.

Dor. Were I a woman, Oh how you'd admire me! cry up every word I said, and scruce your face into a submissive smile; as I have seen a dull Gallant act Wit, and counterfeit pleasantness, when he whispers to a great Person in a Play-house; smile, and look briskly, when the other answers, as if something of extraordinary had past betwixt 'em, when, heaven knows, there was nothing else but, What a clock does your Lordship think it is? and my Lord's repertee is, 'Tis almost Park-time: or, at most, Shall we out of the Pit, and go behind the Scenes for an Act or two? And yet such fine things as these, would be wit in a Mistress's mouth.

Pala. Ay, Boy; there's Dame Nature in the case: he who cannot find wit in a Mistress, deserves to find nothing else, Boy. But these are riddles to thee, child, and I have not leisure to instruct thee; I have affairs to dispatch, great affairs; I am a man of business.

Dor. Come, you shall not go: you have no affairs but what you may dispatch here, to my knowledge.

Pala. I find now, thou art a Boy of more understanding than I thought thee; a very lewd wicked Boy: o' my conscience thou wouldst debauch me, and hast some evil designs upon my person.

Dor. You are mistaken, Sir; I would onely have you show me a more lawful reason why you would leave me, then I can why you should not, and I'll not stay you; for I am not so young, but I understand the necessities of flesh and blood; and the pressing occasions of mankind, as well as you.

Pala. A very forward and understanding Boy! Thou art in great danger of a Pages wit, to be brisk at 14, and dull at 20. But I'll give thee no further account; I must, and will go.

Dor. My life on't, your Mistress is not at home.

Pala. This Imp will make me very angry.

I tell thee, young Sir, she is at home; and at home for me; and, which is more, she is abed for me, and sick for me.

Dor. For you onely?

Pala. Ay, for me onely.

Dor. But how do you know she's sick abed?

Pala. She sent her Husband word so.

Dor. And are you such a novice in Love, to believe a Wife's message to her Husband?

Pala. Why, what the devil should be her meaning else?

Dor. It may be, to go in Masquerade as well as you; to observe your haunts, and keep you company without your knowledge.

Pala. Nay, I'll trust her for that: she loves me too well, to disguise her self from me.

Dor. If I were she, I would disguise on purpose to try your wit; and come to my servant like a Riddle, Read me, and take me.

Pala. I could know her in any shape: my good Genius would prompt me to find out a handsome woman: there's something in her, that would attract me to her without my knowledge.

Dor. Then you make a Load-stone of your Mistress?

Pala. Yes, and I carry Steel about me, which has been so often touch'd, that it never fails to point to the North Pole.

Dor. Yet still my mind gives me, that you have met her disguis'd to night, and have not known her.

Pala. This is the most pragmatistical conceited little fellow, he will needs understand my business better than my self. I tell thee, once more, thou dost not know my Mistress.

Dor. And I tell you, once more, that I know her better than you do.

Pala. The Boy's resolv'd to have the last word,

I find I must go without reply.

Dor. Ah mischief, I have lost him with my fooling. Palamede, Palamede.

[Exit.

He returns. She plucks off her Perruke, and puts it on again when he knows her.

Pala. O Heavens ! is it you, Madam ?

Dor. Now, where was your good Genius, that would prompt you to find me out ?

Pala. Why, you see I was not deceiv'd; you, your self, were my good Genius.

Dor. But where was the Steel, that knew the Load-stone ? ha ?

Pala. The truth is, Madam, the Steel has lost its vertue; and therefore, if you please, we'll new touch it.

Enter Rhodophil; and Melantha in Boy's habit. Rhodophil sees Palamede kissing Doralice's hand.

Rho. Palamede again! am I fall'n into your quarters? What? ingaging with a Boy? is all honourable ?

Pala. O, very honourable on my side. I was just chastising this young Villain; he was running away, without paying his share of the reckoning.

Rho. Then I find I was deceiv'd in him.

Pala. Yes, you are deceiv'd in him: 'tis the archest rogue, if you did but know him.

Mel. Good Rhodophil, let us get off al-a derobbée, for fear I should be discover'd.

Rho. There's no retiring now; I warrant you for discovery: now have I the oddest thought, to entertain you before your Servants face, and he never the wiser; 'twill be the prettiest juggling trick to cheat him when he looks upon us.

Mel. This is the strangest caprice in you.

Pala. (To Doralice) This Rhodophil's the unluckiest fellow to me! this is now the second time he has bar'd the Dice when we were just ready to have nick'd him; but if ever I get the Box again

Dor.

Dor. Do you think he will not know me?
Am I like my self?

Pala. No more then a Picture in the Hangings.

Dor. Nay, then he can never discover me, now the wrong side of the Arras is turn'd towards him.

Pala. At least, 'twill be some pleasure to me, to enjoy what freedom I can while he looks on; I will storm the Out-works of Matrimony even before his face.

Rho. What Wine have you there, Palamede?

Pala. Old Chios, or the rogue's damn'd that drew it.

Rho. Come, to the most constant of Mistresses, that I believe is yours, Palamede.

Dor. Pray spare your Seconds; for my part I am but a weak Brother.

Pala. Now, to the truest of Turtles; that is your Wife, Rhodophil, that lies sick at home in the bed of honour.

Rho. Now let's have one common health, and so have done.

Dor. Then, for once, I'll begin it. Here's to him that has the fairest Lady of Sicily in Masquerade to night.

Pala. This is such an obliging health, I'll kiss thee, dear Rogue, for thy invention. [Kisses her.]

Rho. He who has this Lady, is a happy man, without dispute.

I'm most concern'd in this, I am sure. [Aside.]

Pala. Was it not well found out, Rhodophil?

Mel. Ay, this was bien trouvée indeed.

Dor. (To Melantha.) I suppose I shall do you a kindness to enquire if you have not been in France, Sir?

Mel. To do you service, Sir.

Dor. O, Monsieur, soit valet bien humble. [Saluting her.]

Mel. Votre esclave, Monsieur, de tout Mon Cœur.

[Returning the salute.]

Dor. I suppose, sweet Sir, you are the hope and joy of some thriving Citizen, who has pinch'd himself at home, to breed you abroad, where you have learnt your Exercises, as it appears most awkwardly, and are returned with the addition of a new-lac'd bosom and a Clap, to your good old father, who looks at you with his mouth, while you spout French with your Mari Monsieur.

Pala.

Pala. Let me kiss thee again for that, dear Rogue.

Mel. And you, I imagine, are my young Master, whom your Mother durst not trust upon salt water, but left you to be your own Tutour at fourteen, to be very brisk and entreprenant, to endeavour to be debauch'd ere you have learnt the knack on't, to value your self upon a Clap before you can get it, and to make it the height of your ambition to get a Player for your Mistress.

Rho. (embracing Mel.) O dear young Bully, thou hast tickled him with a repertee i'faith.

Mel. You are one of those that applaud our Countrey Plays, where drums, and trumpets, and bloud, and wounds, are wit.

Rho. Again, my Boy? let me kiss thee most abundantly.

Dor. You are an admirer of the dull French Poetry, which is so thin, that it is the very Leaf-gold of Wit, the very Waters and whip'd Cream of sense, for which a man opens his mouth and gapes, to swallow nothing: and to be an admirer of such profound dulness, one must be endow'd with a great perfection of impudence and ignorance.

Pala. Let me embrace thee most vehemently.

Mel. I'll sacrifice my life for French Poetry. [Advancing.]

Dor. I'll die upon the spot for our Countrey Wit.

Rho. (to Melantha.) Hold, hold, young Mars: Palamede, draw back your Hero.

Pala. 'Tis time; I shall be drawn in for a Second else at the wrong weapon.

Mel. O that I were a man for thy sake!

Dor. You'll be a man as soon as I shall.

Enter a Messenger to Rhodophil.

Mess. Sir, the King has instant business with you. I saw the Guard drawn up by your Lieutenant Before the Palace-gate, ready to march.

Rhod. 'Tis somewhat sodain; say that I am coming.

[Exit Messenger.]

Now, Palamede, what think you of this sport? This is some suddain tumult: will you along?

Pala.

Pala. Yes, yes, I will go; but the devil take me if ever I was less in humour. Why, the pox, could they not have staid their tumult till to morrow? then I had done my business, and been ready for 'em. Truth is, I had a little transitory crime to have committed first; and I am the worst man in the world at repenting, till a sin be throughly done: but what shall we do with the two Boys?

Rho. Let them take a lodging in the house till the business be over.

Dor. What, lie with a Boy? for my part, I own it, I cannot endure to lie with a Boy.

Pala. The more's my sorrow, I cannot accommodate you with a better bed-fellow.

Mel. Let me die, if I enter into a pair of sheets with him that hates the French.

Dor. Pish, take no care for us, but leave us in the streets; I warrant you, as late as it is, I'll find my lodging as well as any drunken Bully of 'em all.

Rho. I'll fight in meer revenge, and wreak my passion [Aside. On all that spoil this hopeful assignation.

Pala. I'm sure we fight in a good quarrel: Rogues may pretend Religion, and the Laws; But a kind Mistress is the Good old Cause.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

Enter Palmyra, Eubulus, Hermogenes.

Palm. You tell me wonders; that Leonidas is Prince Theagenes, the late King's Son.

Eub. It seem'd as strange to him, as now to you, Before I had convinc'd him; But, besides His great resemblance to the King his Father, The Queen his Mother lives, secur'd by me In a Religious House; to whom each year I brought the news of his increasing virtues. My last long absence from you both, was caus'd

By wounds which, in my journey, I receiv'd,
When set upon by thieves; I lost those Jewels
And Letters, which your dying Mother left.

Her. The same he means, which, since, brought to the King,
Made him first know he had a Child alive:
'Twas then my care of Prince Leonidas
Caus'd me to say he was th' Usurpers Son;
Till, after forc'd by your apparent danger,
I made the true discovery of your birth,
And once more hid my Prince's.

Enter Leonidas.

Leon. Hermogenes, and Eubulus, retire;
Those of our party, whom I left without,
Expect your aid and counsel.

[Exeunt ambo.]

Palm. I should, Leonidas, congratulate
This happy change of your exalted fate;
But, as my joy, so you my wonder move;
Your looks have more of Business, then of Love:
And your last words some great design did show.

Leon. I frame not any to be hid from you.
You, in my love, all my designs may see;
But what have love and you design'd for me?
Fortune, once more, has set the ballance right:
First, equall'd us, in lowness; then, in height,
Both of us have so long, like Gamesters, thrown,
Till Fate comes round, and gives to each his own.
As Fate is equal, so may Love appear:
Tell me, at least, what I must hope, or fear.

Palm. After so many proofs, how can you call
My love in doubt? Fear nothing; and hope, all.
Think what a Prince, with honour, may receive,
Or I may give, without a Parents leave.

Leon. You give, and then restrain the grace you show;
As ostentatious Priests, when Souls they woo,
Promise their Heav'n to all, but grant to few.
But do for me, what I have dar'd for you.

I did no argument from duty bring :
Duty's a Name ; and Love's a Real thing.

Palm. Man's love may, like wild torrents, over-flow ;
Woman's as deep, but in its banks must go.

My love is mine ; and that I can impart ;
But cannot give my person, with my heart.

Leon. Your love is then no gift :
For when the person it does not convey,

'Tis to give Gold, and not to give the Key.

Palm. Then ask my Father.

Leon————— He detains my Throne :
Who holds back mine, will hardly give his own.

Palm. What then remains ?

Leon————— That I must have recourse
To Arms ; and take my Love and Crown, by force.

Hermogenes is forming the design ;
And with him, all the brave and loyal joyn.

Palm. And is it thus you court Palmyra's bed ?
Can she the murd'rer of her Parent wed ?

Desist from force : so much you well may give
To Love, and Me, to let my Father live.

Leon. Each act of mine my love to you has shown ;
But you, who tax my want of it, have none.

You bid me part with you, and let him live ;
But they should nothing ask, who nothing give.

Palm. I give what vertue and what duty can,
In vowing ne'r to wed another man.

Leon. You will be forc'd to be Argaleon's wife.

Palm. I'll keep my promise, though I lose my life.

Leon. Then you lose Love, for which we both contend ;
For Life is but the means, but Love's the end.

Palm. Our Souls shall love hereafter.

Leon————— I much fear,
That Soul which cou'd deny the Body here,
To taste of love, would be a niggard there.

Palm. Then 'tis past hope : our cruel fate, I see,
Will make a sad divorce 'twixt you and me.

For, if you force employ, by Heav'n I swear,

And all blest'd Beings,

Leon. _____ Your rash Oath forbear.

Palm. I never _____

Leon. _____ Hold once more. But, yet, as he
Who escapes a da dang'rous leap, looks back to see;

So I desire. now I am past my fear,

To know what was that Oath you meant to swear:

Palm. I meant that if you hazarded your life,

Or fought my Father's, ne'r to be your Wife.

Leon. See now, Palmyra, how unkind you prove!

Could you, with so much ease, forswear my love?

Palm. You force me with your ruinous design.

Leon. Your Father's life is more your care, then Mine.

Palm. You wrong me: 'tis not; though it ought to be;
You are my Care, heav'n knows, as well as he:

Leon. If now the execution I delay,

My Honour, and my Subjects, I betray.

All is prepar'd for the just enterprize;

And the whole City will to morrow rise.

The Leaders of the party are within,

And Eubulus has sworn that he will bring,

To head their Arms, the person of their King.

Palm. In telling this, you make me guilty too;

I therefore must discover what I know:

What Honour bids you do, Nature bids me prevent;

But kill me first; and then pursue your black intent.

Leon. Palmyra, no; you shall not need to die;

Yet I'll not trust so strict a piety.

Within there.

Enter Eubulus.

Eubulus, a Guard prepare;

Here, I commit this pris'ner to your care.

[Kisses Palmyra's hand; then gives it to Eubulus.

Palm. Leonidas, I never thought these bands

Could e'r be giv'n me by a Lover's hands.

Leon. Palmyra, thus your Judge himself arraigns; [kneeling.

He who impos'd these bonds, still wears your chains:
 When you to Love or Duty false must be,
 Or to your Father guilty, or to me,
 These chains, alone, remain to set you free.

[Noise of swords clashing.]

Poly. (within) Secure these, first; then search the inner room.
Leon. From whence do these tumultuous clamours come?

Enter Hermogenes, hastily.

Her. We are betray'd; and there remains alone
 This comfort, that your person is not known.

Enter the King, Argaleon, Rhodophil, Palamede, Guards;
some like Citizens as prisoners.

Poly. What mean this midnight-consultations here,
 Where I, like an unsummon'd guest, appear?

Leon. Sir —————

Arga. ————— There needs no excuse; 'tis understood;
 You were all watching, for your Prince's good.

Poly. My reverend City-friends, you are well met!
 On what great work were your grave wisdoms set?
 Which of my actions were you scanning here?
 What French invasion have you found to fear?

Leon. They are my friends; and come, Sir, with intent
 To take their leaves before my banishment.

Poly. Your exile, in both sexes, friends can find:
 I see the Ladies, like the men, are kind. [Seeing Palmyra.

Palm. Alas, I came but ————— [kneeling.

Poly. ————— Adde not to your crime
 A lie: I'll hear you speak some other time.

How? Eubulus! nor time, nor thy disguise,
 Can keep thee, undiscover'd, from my eyes.

A Guard there; seize 'em all.

Rbo. Yield, Sir; what use of valour can be shown?

Pal. One, and unarm'd, against a multitude!

○ for a sword!

[He reaches at one of the Guards Halberds, and is seiz'd behind.

I w'not lose my breath
In fruitless pray'rs; but beg a speedy death.

Palm. O spare Leonidas, and punish me.

Poly. Mean Girl, thou want'st an Advocate for thee.

Now the mysterious knot will be unty'd;
Whether the young King lives, or where he dy'd:

Tomorrows dawn shall the dark riddle clear;

Crown all my joys; and dissipate my fear. [Exeunt omnes.

ACT V. SCENE I.

Palamede, Straton. Palamede with a Letter in his hand.

Pal. THis evening, say'st thou? will they both be here?
Stra. Yes, Sir; both my old Master, and your Mistris's Father: the old Gentlemen ride hard this journey; they say, it shall be the last time they will see the Town; and both of 'em are so pleas'd with this marriage, which they have concluded for you, that I am afraid they will live some years longer to trouble you, with the joy of it.

Pal. But this is such an unreasonable thing, to impose upon me to be marri'd to morrow; 'tis hurrying a man to execution, without giving him time to say his pray'rs.

Stra. Yet, if I might advise you, Sir, you should not delay it: for your younger Brother comes up with 'em, and is got already into their favours. He has gain'd much upon my old Master, by finding fault with Inn-keepers Bills, and by starving us, and our Horses, to show his frugality; and he is very well with your Mistris's Father, by giving him Receipts for the Splene, Gout, and Scurvy, and other infirmities of old age.

Pal. All rout him, and his Countrey education: Pox on him,
I remember

I remember him before I travell'd, he had nothing in him but meer Jocky; us'd to talk loud, and make matches, and was all for the crack of the field: sense and wit were as much banish'd from his discourse, as they are when the Court goes out of Town to a Horse-race. Go now and provide your Master's Lodgings.

Str. I go, Sir.

[Exit.

Pal. It vexes me to the heart; to leave all my designs with Doralice unfinish'd; to have flown her so often to a mark, and still to be bob'd at retrieve: if I had but once enjoy'd her, though I could not have satisfi'd my stomach, with the feast, at least I should have relish'd my mouth a little; but now——

Enter Philotis.

Phil. Oh, Sir, you are happily met; I was coming to find you.

Pal. From your Lady, I hope.

Phil. Partly from her; but more especially from my self: she has just now receiv'd a Letter from her Fathet, with an absolute command to dispose her self to marry you to morrow.

Pal. And she takes it to the death?

Phil. Quite contrary: the Letter could never have come in a more lucky minute; for it found her in an ill humour with a Rival of yours, that shall be nameless, about the pronunciation of a French word.

Pal. Count Rhodophil; never disguise it, I know the Amour: but I hope you took the occasion to strike in for me?

Phil. It was my good fortune to do you some small service in it; for your sake I discommended him all over: cloaths, person, humour, behaviour, every thing; and to sum up all, told her, It was impossible to find a marri'd man that was otherwise; for they were all so mortifi'd at home with their wives ill humours, that they could never recover themselves to be company abroad.

Pal. Most divinely urg'd!

Phil. Then I took occasion to commend your good qualities: as, the sweetness of your humour, the comeliness of your person, person, your good Meene, your valour ; but, above all, your liberality.

Pal. I vow to Gad I had like to have forgot that good quality in my self, if thou had'st not remember'd me on't : here are five Pieces for thee.

Phil. Lord, you have the softest hand, Sir ! it would do a woman good to touch it : Count Rhodophil's is not half so soft ; for I remember I felt it once, when he gave me ten Pieces for my New-years gift.

Pal. O, I understand you, Madam ; you shall find my hand as soft again as Count Rhodophil's : there are twenty Pieces for you. The former was but a Retaining Fee ; now I hope you'll plead for me.

Phil. Your own merits speak enough. Be sure onely to ply her with French words, and I'll warrant you'll do your business. Here are a list of her phrases for this day : use 'em to her upon all occasions, and foil her at her own weapon ; for she's like one of the old Amazons, she'l never marry, except it be the man who has first conquer'd her.

Pal. I'll be sure to follow your advice : but you'll forget to further my design.

Phil. What, do you think I'll be ungrateful? ———

——— But, however, if you distrust my memory, put some token on my finger to remember it by : that Diamond there would do admirably.

Pal. There 'tis ; and I ask your pardon heartily for calling your memory into question : I assure you I'll trust it another time, without putting you to the trouble of another token.

Enter Palmyra and Artemis.

Art. Madam, this way the prisoners are to pass ; Here you may see Leonidas.

Palm. Then here I'll stay, and follow him to death.

Enter

Enter Melantha hastily.

Mela. O, here's her Highness !
Now is my time to introduce my self, and to make my court to her, in my new French phrases. Stay, let me read my catalogue—suite, figure, chagrin, naive, and let me die for the Parenthesis of all.

Pal. (aside) Do, persecute her ; and I'll persecute thee as fast in thy own dialect.

Mel. Madam, the Princess ! let me die, but this is a most horrid spectacle, to see a person who makes so grand a figure in the Court, without the suite of a Princess, and entertaining your Chagrin all alone ; (Naivete should have been there, but the disobedient word would not come in.)

Palm. What is she, Artemis ?

Art. An impertinent Lady, Madam ; very ambitious of being known to your Highness.

Pal. (to Melantha) Let me die, Madam, if I have not waited you here these two long hours, without so much as the suite of a single Servant to attend me ; entertaining my self with my own Chagrin, till I had the honour to see your Ladieship, who are a person that makes so considerable a figure in the Court.

Mel. Truce with your douceurs, good servant ; you see I am addressing to the Princess ; pray do not embarrass me—embarrass me ! what a delicious French word do you make me lose upon you too !

(To the Princess) Your Highness, Madam, will please to pardon the Evenue which I made, in not sooner finding you out to be a Princess : but let me die if this Eclaircissement which is made this day of your quality, does not ravish me ; and give me leave to tell you—

Pal. But first give me leave to tell you, Madam, that I have so great a tender for your person, and such a panchant to do you service, that—

Mel. What, must I still be troubled with your sottises ? (There's another word lost, that I meant for the Princess, with a mischief to you) But your Highness, Madam:—

Pal. But your Ladieship, Madam—

Enter

Enter Leonidas guarded, and led over the Stage.

Mel. Out upon him, how he looks, Madam! now he's found no Prince, he is the strangest figure of a man; how could I make that Coup d'etourdy to think him one?

Palm. Away, impertinent ——— My dear Leonidas!

Leon. My dear Palmyra!

Palm. Death shall never part us;

My Destiny is yours. [He is led off; she follows.

Mel. Impertinent! Oh I am the most unfortunate person this day breathing: that the Princess should thus rompre en visiere, without occasion. Let me die but I'll follow her to death, till I make my peace.

Pal. (holding her) And let me die, but I'll follow you to the Infernals till you pity me.

Mel. (turning towards him angrily) Ay, 'tis long of you that this Malheur is fall'n upon me; your impertinence has put me out of the good graces of the Princess, and all that, which has ruin'd me and all that, and therefore let me die but I'll be reveng'd, and all that.

Pal. Façon, façon, you must and shall love me, and all that; for my old man is coming up, and all that; and I am desespéré au dernier, and will not be disinherited, and all that.

Mel. How durst you interrupt me so mal a propos, when you knew I was addressing to the Princess?

Pal. But why would you address your self so much a contre-temps then?

Mel. Ah mal peste!

Pal. Ah l'enrage!

Phil. Radoncissez-vous, de grace, Madame; vous êtes bien en colère pour peu de chose. Vous n'entendez pas la raillerie gallante.

Mel. Ad'autres, ad'autres: he mocks himself of me, he abuses me: ah me unfortunate! [cries!

Phil. You mistake him, Madam, he does but accommodate his phrase to your refin'd language. Ah, qu'il est un Cavalier accompli! pursue your point, Sir ——— [To him.

Pal. Ah qu'il fait beau dans ces bocages; [Singing.

Ab que le ciel donne un beau jour !

There I was with you, with a minouit.

Mel. Let me die now, but this singing is fine, and extremely French in him : — [Laughs. But then, that he should use my own words, as it were in contempt of me, I cannot bear it. — [Crying.

Pal. Ces beaux sejours, ces doux ramages — [Singing.

Mel. Ces beaux Sejours, ces doux ramages, — [Singing after him. Ces beaux sejours, nous invitent à l'Amour ! Let me die but he sings en Cavalier, and so humours the Cadence. — [Laughing.

Pal. Voy, ma Clymene, voy sous ce kbesne, — [Singing again. S'entrebaïser ces oiseaux amoureux ! Let me die now, but that was fine. Ah, now, for three or four brisk Frenchmen, to be put into Masquing habits, and to sing it on a Theatre, how witty it would be! and then to dance helter skelter to a Chanson a boire: toute la terre, toute la terre est a moy! what's matter though it were made, and sung, two or three years ago in Cabarets, how it would attract the admiration, especially of every one that's an eweille!

Mel. Well; I begin to have a tender for you; but yet, upon condition, that ——— when we are marri'd, you ———

[Pal. sings, while she speaks.

Phil. You must drown her voice: if she makes her French conditions, you are a slave for ever.

Mel. First, will you engage ——— that

Pal. Fa, la, la, la, &c.

[Loudly.

Mel. Will you hear the conditions?

Pal. No; I will hear no conditions! I am resolv'd to win you en Francois: to be very airy, with abundance of noise, and no sense: Fa, la, la, la, &c.

Mel. Hold, hold: I am vanquish'd with your gayeté d'esprit. I am yours, and will be yours, sans nulle reserve, ny condition: and let me die, if I do not think my self the happiest Nymph in Sicily ——— My dear French Dear, stay but a minute, till I raccommode my self with the Princess; and then I am yours, jusq' a la mort.

Allons donc ——— [Exit Mel. Philot.

Pal. (Solus, fanning himself with his hat) I never thought before fore that wooing was so laborious an exercise; if she were worth a million, I have deserv'd her; and now, me-thinks too, with taking all this pains for her, I begin to like her. 'Tis so; I have known many, who never car'd for Hare nor Partridge, but those they caught themselves would eat heartily: the pains, and the story a man tells of the taking of 'em, makes the meat go down more pleasantly. Besides, last night I had a sweet dream of her, and, Gad, she I have once dream'd of, I am stark mad till I enjoy her, let her be never so ugly.

Enter Doralice.

Dor. Who's that you are so mad to enjoy, Palamede?

Pal. You may easily imagine that, sweet Doralice.

Dor. More easily than you think I can: I met just now with a certain man, who came to you with Letters, from a certain old Gentleman, yclipped your father; whereby I am given to understand, that to-morrow you are to take an Oath in the Church to be grave henceforward, to go ill-dress'd and slovenly, to get heirs for your estate, and to dandle 'em for your diversion; and, in short, that Love and Courtship are to be no more.

Pal. Now have I so much shame to be thus apprehended in the manner, that I can neither speak nor look upon you; I have abundance of grace in me, that I find: But if you have any spark of true friendship in you, retire a little with me to the next room, that has a couch or bed in't, and bestow your charity upon a poor dying man: a little comfort from a Mistress, before a man is going to give himself in Marriage, is as good as a lusty dose of Strong-water to a dying Malefactor; it takes away the sense of hell, and hanging from him.

Dor. No, good Palamede, I must not be so injurious to your Bride: 'tis ill drawing from the Bank to day, when all your ready money is payable to morrow.

Pal. A Wife is onely to have the ripe fruit, that falls of it self; but a wise man will always preserve a shaking for a Mistress.

Dor. But a Wife for the first quarter is a Mistress.

Pal. But when the second comes.

Dor. When it does come, you are so given to variety, that you would make a Wife of me in another quarter.

Pal. No, never, except I were married to you: marri'd people can never oblige one another; for all they do is duty, and consequently there can be no thanks: but love is more frank and generous than he is honest; he's a liberal giver, but a cursed pay-master.

Dor. I declare I will have no Gallant; but, if I would, he should never be a marri'd man; a marri'd man is but a Mistress's half-servant, as a Clergy-man is but the King's half-subject: for a man to come to me that smells o' th' Wife! 's life, I wou'd as soon wear her old Gown after her, as her Husband.

Pal. Yet 'tisa kind of fashion to wear a Princess's cast shoes, you see the Countrey Ladies buy 'em to be fine in them.

Dor. Yes, a Princess's shoes may be worn after her, because they keep their fashion, by being so very little us'd; but generally a marri'd man is the creature of the world the most out of fashion; his behaviour is dumpish, his discourse his wife and family, his habit so much neglected, it looks as if that were marri'd too; his Hat is marri'd, his Perruke is marri'd, his Breeches are marri'd, and if we could look within his Breeches, we should find him marri'd there too.

Pal. Am I then to be discarded for ever? pray do but mark how terrible that word sounds; For ever! it has a very damn'd sound, Doralice.

Dor. Ay, for ever! it sounds as hellishly to me, as it can do to you, but there's no help for't.

Pal. Yet if we had but once enjoy'd one another; but then once onely, is worse then not at all: it leaves a man with such a lingring after it.

Dor. For ought I know 'tis better that we have not; we might upon trial have lik'd each other less, as many a man and woman, that have lov'd as desperately as we, and yet when they came to possession, have sigh'd, and cri'd to themselves, Is this all?

Pal. That is onely, if the Servant were not found a man of this world; but if, upon trial, we had not lik'd each other, we had had certainly left loving; and faith; that's the greater happiness of the two.

Dor. 'Tis better as 'tis; we have drawn off already as much of our Love as would run clear; after possessing, the rest is but jealousies, and disquiets, and quarrelling, and piecing.

Pal. Nay, after one great quarrel, there's never any sound piecing; the love is apt to break in the same place again.

Dor. I declare I would never renew a love; that's like him who trims an old Coach for ten years together, he might buy a new one better cheap.

Pal. Well, Madam, I am convinc'd, that 'tis best for us not to have enjoy'd; but Gad, the strongest reason is, because I can't help it.

Dor. The onely way to keep us new to one another, is never to enjoy, as they keep grapes by hanging 'em upon a line, they must touch nothing if you would preserve 'em fresh.

Pal. But then they wither, and grow dry in the very keeping; however I shall have a warmth for you, and an eagerness, every time I see you; and if I chance to out-live Melantha——

Dor. And if I chance to out-live Rhodophil——

Pal. Well, I'll cherish my body as much as I can upon that hope. 'Tis true, I would not directly murder the wife of my bosome; but to kill her civilly, by the way of kindness, I'll put as fair as another man: I'll begin to morrow night, and be very wrathful with her; that's resolv'd on.

Dor. Well, Palamede, here's my hand, I'll venture to be your second Wife, for all your threatnings.

Pal. In the meantime I'll watch you hourly, as I would the ripeness of a Melon; and I hope you'll give me leave now and then to look on you, and to see if you are not ready to be cut yet.

Dor. No, no, that must not be, Palamede, for fear the Gardener should come and catch you taking up the glass.

Enter Rhodophil.

Rho. (Aside) Billing so sweetly! now I am confirm'd in my suspicions; I must put an end to this, ere it go further. [Aside.

(To

(To Doralice.) Cry you mercy, Spouse; I fear I have interrupted your recreations.

Dor. What recreations?

Rho. Nay, no excuses, good Spouse; I saw fair hand convey'd to lip, and prest, as though you had been squeezing soft wax together for an Indenture. Palamede, you and I must clear this reckoning; why would you have seduc'd my wife?

Pal. Why would you have debauch'd my Mistress?

Rho. What do you think of that civil couple, that play'd at a Game call'd, Hide and Seek, last evening, in the Grotto?

Pal. What do you think of that innocent pair, who made it their pretence to seek for others, but came, indeed, to hide themselves there?

Rho. All things consider'd, I begin vehemently to suspect, that the young Gentleman I found in your company last night, was a certain youth of my acquaintance.

Pal. And I have an odd imagination, that you could never have suspected my small Gallant, if your little villanous Frenchman had not been a false Brother.

Rho. Farther Arguments are needles; Draw off; I shall speak to you now by the way of Bilbo.

[Claps his hand to his sword.

Pal. And I shall answer you by the way of Danger-field.

[Claps his hand on his.

Dor. Hold; hold; are not you two a couple of mad fighting fools, to cut one another's throats for nothing?

Pal. How for nothing? he courts the woman I must marry.

Rho. And he courts you whom I have marry'd.

Dor. But you can neither of you be jealous of what you love not.

Rho. Faith I am jealous, and that makes me partly suspect that I love you better then I thought.

Dor. Pish! a meer jealousy of honour.

Rho. Gad I am afraid there's something else in't; for Palamede has wit, and if he loves you, there's something more in ye then I have found: some rich Mine, for ought I know, that I have not yet discover'd.

Pal. 'S life, what's this? here's an argument for me to love

Melantha;

Melantha; for he has lov'd her, and he has wit too, and, for ought I know, there may be a Mine: but, if there be, I am resolv'd I'll dig for't.

Dor. (to Rhod.) Then I have found my account in raising your jealousy: O! 'tis the most delicate sharp sawce to a cloy'd stomach; it will give you a new edge, Rhodophil.

Rho. And a new point too, Doralice, if I could be sure thou art honest.

Dor. If you are wise, believe me for your own sake: Love and Religion have but one thing to trust to; that's a good sound faith. Consider, if I have play'd false, you can never find it out by any experiment you can make upon me.

Rho. No? Why, suppose I had a delicate screw'd Gun, if I left her clean, and found her foul, I should discover, to my cost, she had been shot in.

Dor. But if you left her clean, and found her onely rusty, you would discover, to your shame, she was onely so for want of shooting.

Pal. Rhodophil, you know me too well, to imagine I speak for fear; and therefore in consideration of our past friendship, I will tell you, and bind it by all things holy, that Doralice is innocent.

Rho. Friend, I will believe you, and vow the same for your Melantha; but the devil on't is, how we shall keep 'em so.

Pal. What dost think of a blessed community betwixt us four, for the solace of the women, and relief of the men? Methinks it would be a pleasant kind of life: Wife and Husband for the standing Dish, and Mistris and Gallant for the Desert.

Rhod. But suppose the Wife and the Mistris should both long for the standing Dish, how should they be satisfi'd together?

Pal. In such a case they must draw lots: and yet that would not do neither; for they would both be wishing for the longest out?

Rho. Then I think, Palamede, we had as good make a firm League, not to invade each others propriety.

Pal. Content, say I. From henceforth let all acts of hostility cease betwixt us; and that in the usual form of Treaties, as well by Sea as by Land, and in all Fresh waters.

Dor. I will adde but one Proviso, That who ever breaks the League, either by war abroad, or by neglect at home, both the Women shall revenge themselves, by the help of the other party.

Rho. That's but reasonable. Come away, Doralice; I have a great temptation to be sealing Articles in private.

Palam. Haft thou so? [Claps him on the shoulder.]
Fall on, Machduff;
And curst be he that first cries, Hold, enough.

Enter Polydamas, Palmyra, Artemis, Argaleon: after them, Eubulus, and Hermogenes, guarded.

Palm. Sir, on my knees I beg you.

Pol. Away, I'll hear no more.

Palm. For my dead Mother's sake; you say you lov'd her, And tell me I resemble her. Thus she Had begg'd.

Pol. _____ And thus had I deny'd her.

Palm. You must be merciful.

Arga. _____ You must be constant.

Pol. Go, bear 'em to the torture; you have boasted You have a King to head you: I would know To whom I must resign.

Eub. _____ This is our recompence For serving thy dead Queen.

Her. _____ And education Of thy daughter.

Arga. You are too modest, in not naming all His obligations to you: why did you Omit his Son, the Prince Leonidas?

Pol. That Imposture I had forgot; their tortures shall be doubled.

Her. You please me, I shall die the sooner.

Eub. No; could I live an age, and still be rack'd, I still would keep the secret.

[As they are going off,

Enter Leonidas, guarded.

Leon. Oh whither do you hurry inn
If you have any justice, spare their lives,
Or if I cannot make you just, at least
I'll teach you to more purpose to be cruel.

Palm. Alas, what does he seek!

Leon. Make me the object of your hate and vengeance!
Are these decrepid bodies worn to ruine,
Just ready, of themselves, to fall asunder,
And to let drop the soul,
Are they fit subjects for a Rack, and Tortures?
Where would you fasten any hold upon 'em?
Place pains on me; united fix 'em here;
I have both youth, and strength, and soul to bear 'em:
And if they merit death, then I much more;
Since 'tis for me they suffer.

Her. Heav'n forbid
We should redeem our pains, or worthless lives,
By our exposing yours.

Eub. Away with us: Farewell, Sir.
I only suffer in my fears for you.

Arga. So much concern'd for him? then my Suspicion's true.

[Aside

[Whispers the King.]

Palm. Hear yet my last request, for poor Leonidas;
Or take my life with his.

Arga. Rest satisfi'd; Leonidas is he.

[To the King.

Pol. I am amaz'd: what must be done?

Arga. Command his execution instantly;
Give him not leisure to discover it;
He may corrupt the Soldiers.

Pol. Hence with that Traitour; bear him to his death:
Haste there, and see my will perform'd.

Leon. Nay, then I'll die like him the Gods have made me.
Hold, Gentlemen; I am

[Argaleon stops his mouth.

Marriage a-la-Mode.

Arga. Thou art a Traitor; 'tis not fit to hear thee.

Leon. I say I am the _____ [Getting loose a little.]

Arga. So; gag him, and lead him off.

[Again stopping his mouth.]

{ Leonidas, Hermogenes, Eubulus, led off:
{ Polydamas and Argaleon follow.

Palm. Duty and Love, by turns possess my soul,

And struggle for a fatal victory:

I will discover he's the King; Ah, no:

That will perhaps save him;

But then I am guilty of a father's ruine.

What shall I do, or not do? either way

I must destroy a Parent, or a Lover.

Break heart; for that's the least of ills to me,

And Death the onely cure. [Swoons.]

Arte. Help, help the Princess.

Rbo. Bear her gently hence, where she may

Have more succour. [She is born off, Arte. follows her.]

[Shouts within, and clashing of swords.]

Pal. What noise is that?

Enter Amalthea, running.

Amal. Oh, Gentle-men, if you have loyalty,

Or courage, show it now: Leonidas

Broke on the sudden from his Guards, and snatching

A sword from one, his back against the Scaffold,

Bravely defends himself; and owns aloud

He is our long lost King, found for this moment;

But, if your valours help not, lost for ever.

Two of his Guards, mov'd by the sense of virtue,

Are turn'd for him, and there they stand at Bay

Against an host of foes.

Rbo. _____ Madam, no more;

We lose time: my command, or my example,

May move the Soldiers to the better cause.

You'll

Marriage a-la-Mode.

83

You'll second me?

Pal. Or die with you: no Subject e'r can meet
A nobler fate, then at his Sovereign's feet.

[To Pal.

[Exeunt.

[Clashing of swords within, and shouts.

*Enter Leonidas, Rhodophil, Palamede, Eubulus, Hermogenes, and their party, victorious.
Polydamas and Argaeon, disarm'd.*

Leon. That I survive the dangers of this day,
Next to the Gods, brave friends, be yours the honour.
And let Heav'n witness for me, that my joy
Is not more great for this my right restor'd,
Than 'tis, that I have power to recompence
Your Loyalty and Valour. Let mean Princes
Of abject souls, fear to reward great actions;
I mean to show,
That whatsoe'r subjects, like you, dare merit,
A King, like me, dares give——

Rho. You make us blush, we have deserv'd so little.

Pal. And yet instruct us how to merit more.

Leon. And as I would be just in my rewards,
So should I in my punishments; these two,
This the Usurper of my Crown, the other
Of my Palmyra's love, deserve that death
Which both design'd for me.

Pol. ————— And we expect it.

Arga. I have too long been happy to live wretched.

Pol. And I too long have govern'd, to desire
A life without an Empire.

Leon. You are Palmyra's father; and as such,
Though not a King, shall have obedience paid
From him who is one. Father, in that name,
All injuries forgot, and duty own'd.

[Embraces him.

Pol. O, had I known you could have been this King,
Thus God-like, great and good, I should have wish'd
T'have been dethron'd before. 'Tis now I live,
And more then Reign; now all my joys flow pure,

Unmix'd with cares, and undisturb'd by conscience.

Enter Palmyra, Amalthea, Artemis, Doralice, and Melantha.

Leon. See, my Palmyra comes! the frighted blood
Scarce yet recall'd to her pale cheeks,
Like the first streaks of light broke loose from darkness,
And dawning into blushes. — Sir, you said, [To Polyda.
Your joys were full; Oh, would you make mine so!
I am but half-restor'd without this blessing.

Pol. The Gods, and my Palmyra, make you happy,
As you make me. [Gives her hand to Leonidas.

Palmy. ————— Now all my prayers are heard:
I may be dutiful, and yet may love.

Virtue, and patience, have at length unravell'd.

The knots which Fortune ty'd.

Mel. Let me die, but I'll congratulate his Majesty: how admirably well his Royalty
Becomes him! Becomes! that is luy s'ed, but our damn'd Language expresses nothing.

Pal. How? does it become him already? 'twas but just now you said, he was such a figure of a man.

Mel. True, my dear, when he was a private man he was a figure; but since he is a King, methinks he has assum'd another figure: he looks so grand, and so August.

[Going to the King.

Pal. Stay, stay; I'll present you when it is more convenient.
I find I must get her a place at Court; and when she is once there, she can be no longer ridiculous; for she is young enough, and pretty enough, and fool enough, and French enough, to bring up a fashion there to be affected.

Leon. (to Rhodophil) Did she then lead you to this brave attempt?

(To Amalthea) To you, fair Amalthea, what I am,
And what all these, from me, we joyntly owe:
First, therefore, to your great desert, we give

Your

Your Brother's life ; but keep him under guard,
Till our new power be settled. What more grace
He may receive, shall from his future carriage
Be given, as he deserves.

Arga. I neither now desire, nor will deserve it ;
My loss is such as cannot be repair'd,
And to the wretched, life can be no mercy.

Leon. Then be a prisoner always : thy ill fate,
And pride will have it so : but since, in this, I cannot,
Instruct me, generous Amalthea, how

A King may serve you,

Amal. _____ I have all I hope,
And all I now must wish ; I see you happy.
Those hours I have to live, which Heav'n in pity
Will make but few, I vow to spend with Vestals :
The greatest part, in pray'rs for you ; the rest
In mourning my unworthiness.

Press me not farther to explain my self ;
'Twill not become me, and may cause your trouble.

Leon. Too well I understand her secret grief,
But dare not seem to know it. — Come
my fairest,

[Aside.
To Palmyra.

Beyond my Crown, I have one joy in store ;
To give that Crown to her whom I adore.

[Exeunt omnes.

Epilogue.

Epilogue.

THUS have my Spouse and I inform'd the Nation,
And led you all the way to Reformation.
Not with dull Morals, gravely writ, like those,
Which men of easie Phlegme, with care compose.
Your Poet's of stiff words, and limber sense,
Born on the confines of indifference.
But by examples drawn, I dare to say,
From most of you, who hear, and see the Play.
There are more Rhodophils in this Theatre,
More Palamedes, and some few Wives, I fear.
But yet too far our Poet would not run,
Though 'twas well offer'd, there was nothing done.
He would not quite the Woman's frailty bare,
But stript 'em to the waste, and left 'em there.
And the men's faults are less severely shown,
For he considers that himself is one.
Some stabbing Wits, to bloudy Satyr bent,
Would treat both Sexes with less complement:
Would lay the Scene at home, of Husbands tell,
For Wenches, taking up their Wives i' th' Mell,
And a brisk bout which each of them did want,
Made by mistake of Mistris and Gallant.
Our modest Authour, thought it was enough
To cut you off a Sample of the stuff:
He spar'd my shame, which you, I'm sure, would not,
For you were all for driving on the Plot:
You sigh'd when I came in to break the sport,
And set your teeth when each design fell short.
To Wives, and servants all good wishes lend,
But the poor Cuckold seldom finds a friend.
Since therefore Court and Town will take no pity,
I humbly cast my self upon the City.

F I N I S.

RICE UNIVERSITY LIBRARY
P. O. Box 1892
Houston, Texas 77001

